ADDITIONAL FROM EUROPE.

Arrival of the City of New-York.

Rumors of Recognition of the South by France.

Reception of the Officers of the George Griswold at Liverpool.

The Escape of the Sumter.

The Inman screw steamer City of New-York, Capt. Parks, which sailed from Liverpool at 11 o'clock on the morning of the 18th, and from Queenstown on the afternoon of Feb. 19, arrived here yesterday morning.

She brings the United States mails and 449 bales of cotton.

Her advices have been generally anticipated.

The mails by the Siberian, which arrived at Portland on Wednesday night, also reached this City last evening.

The Paris correspondent of the London Herald writes on the 14th ult.:

"I am informed that before many days elapse the Moniteur will contain an important document relating to American affairs. At the same time either me to remind you of the information I communicated some time since, of the probability of a recognition of the Southern Confederacy by France in the event of the hypothesis of M. Drouyn de Lhuys being rejected by the authorities at Washington.

It is reported in well-informed circles that the French Government have in their possession proofs of the American Abolitionists having supplied the Mexicans with arms and ammunition. Should this be true, it may give quite an unexpected turn to the American War."

THE FAMINE SHIP.

Proceedings of the Liverpool Chamber of Commerce—Address of the President—Response of Capt. Lunt.

The Chamber of Commerce of Liverpool were in session on the 16th February, to present an address to Capt. Lunt, the commander of the ship George Griswold, in acknowledgment of the magnificent gratuity which that ship had brought to the poverty of the Old World, from the wealth of the New. The meeting was a very large one. After some preliminary remarks by the President of the Chamber, Mr. Robert Maguil, and by Sir William Brown, who occupied the Chair, the address (published in the Times of Feb. 20) was handed to Capt. Lunt.

REPLY OF CAPT. LUNT.

Capt. Lunt, who was received with terrific cheering, again and again renewed, said:

Mr. President and Gentlemen of the Liverpool Chamber of Commerce—I receive the address you have now presented me with much pleasure, and with heartfelt thanks for the honor you have thus conferred upon me personally, and upon Messrs. N. L. Gazan Gazzam, the owners of the ship, whom I represent in the proceedings on this occasion. I claim no distinction in connection with the ship George Griswold. I had great pleasure in volunteering my services to direct her passage across the Atlantic to Liverpool. [Applause.] The need of praise is due to the benevolent donors of her cargo, to those who purchased and placed it on board, and to the mercantile firm who have sent it to your suffering countrymen, all free of charge. [Cheers.] In their name, and in the name of the United States, then so well represented, I accept your kind acknowledgment for the donation it has been my happiness to bring over the sea. The manner in which the George Griswold has been received will be highly satisfactory to all parties concerned. Every demonstration of respect has been paid the charitable object of the ship, that could have been desired. All these acts of courtesy will be ever remembered and cherished. [Applause.] In conclusion, Mr. President and gentlemen, permit me to express the hope that this germ of good feeling may strengthen the ties that should ever bind England and America together. Most heartily do I join in the petition which closes your address, for peace and the establishment of good-will among all the nations of the earth. [Loud and repeated cheers.]

Speeches ensued from several gentlemen, including Rev. C. W. Denison, the Chaplain of the ship; and a very handsome telescope, the gift of Mr. Wm. Da Silva, was presented to Capt. Lunt, in receiving which he expressed his gratitude to Mr. Da Silva for such a proof of his good feeling, and said he also wished to thank the people who discharged the ship, having come forward and offered their gratuitous services. The coopers, also, did the same thing, for the cargo was coopered gratuitously; and not only so, but even the very boatmen labored without fee. ["Hear, hear," and applause.]

At a special meeting of the General Committee of the Central Relief Fund, held on the 16th February, at Manchester, the Mayor presiding, it was unanimously resolved, on the motion of Mr. Ainsworth, (President of the Chamber of Commerce,) seconded by Mr. Ross, to invite the officers of the George Griswold to receive an address in the Manchester Town Hall, on such a day as may be arranged. The Mayor of Manchester and Mr. Mactura, on behalf of the Committee, and Mr. H. Tennent, Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, were requested to convey the invitation, which was also extended to the members of the English Committee to whom the cargo had been consigned, and to the American Consul and Vice-Consul. The presentation is to take place at a luncheon in the Manchester Town Hall, the cost of which will be defrayed by subscription.

British Aid to the Confederates.

From the London Daily News.

TO THE RIGHT HON. VISCOUNT PALMERSTON.

My Lord: The neutrality of Her Majesty's Government in the contest between the United States and the Slaveholders' Confederacy is either a reality or a mere profession. If the former, it should be thorough and be honestly carried out. How far it is one or the other facts must determine. In the majority of criminal cases, proof of guilt depends chiefly upon circumstantial evidence. In the absence of direct testimony, and if only reasonably conclusive, it is held sufficient to establish culpability. Let the same law be applied in the present case; the verdict will not be doubtful.

Numbers of vessels laden with material and munitions of war constantly leave the chief ports of the United Kingdom, notably London, Liverpool, Bristol, Hull, Glasgow and Belfast. They clear outward for neutral ports; but many of them are again heard of as having been captured by Federal cruisers while attempting to run the blockade, or as having succeeded in doing so. A few cases for the year 1862 are submitted, all from the port of London:

On the 29th of January the steamer Scotchman, Capt. Barron, cleared outward for Melbourne. Her broker was W. S. Horsnell. Two chief shippers of her cargo were Isaac, Phillips & Co. and Gustav Brandes. Besides a miscellaneous assortment of articles suitable only for an army engaged in active warfare, she took out 230 pistols, 500 cases ball cartridges, 1,200,000 percussion caps, 2,000 muskets, 12,440 rifled and 30,000 pounds gunpowder. She ran the blockade, and has since done so again. She is now called the Renato.

On the 8th of February cleared out for Nassau the steamer Southwick, Capt. Spark; brokers, Messrs. Isaac Campbell & Co.; chief shippers, Messrs. Moreton & Co., Campbell & Co., Sumner & Co., G. Spellman, Varasseur and W. Roberts. Her miscellaneous cargo also consisted of articles for an army on active service, and the same fact is common to all the other vessels mentioned in the present category. Besides these goods she conveyed away two cases swords, six cannon, 600 muskets, 2,500 cast-iron shells and 60 cases of the same, 10,040 rifles, 2,000,000 percussion caps and 104,000 lbs. of gunpowder. She dropped down to Greenhithe, and there took on board her powder and rifles.

On the 23d May the steamer Mariner, 537 tons, Capt. Ramsay, owners C. E. Pearson & Co., of Hull, cleared out for Tampico and Bermuda; chief shippers, J. C. Blakeville and E. D. Chipindale. Her war cargo consisted of 200 rifles, 710 cases and 32 boxes of shells, one package of percussion fuses, three 170-pounder cannon, four 32-pounders, and one 18-pounder rifled. She is reported to have taken on board at Grenadines a large quantity of gunpowder.

On the 29th July cleared out for Demerara the steamer Agrippina, 276 tons, McQueen, master; A. W. Flock, broker; chief shippers, Messrs. J. W. Baldwin and S. J. Campbell & Co. This vessel took away 160 pistols, one case cutlasses, 25 cannon with their carriages, 120 rifles with their bayonets, 120 cases of the same weapon, 15,000 and one case of cartridges, 20,000 percussion caps, and 10,000 pounds gunpowder. She went out direct to Tarcoita, and there transhipped her cargo on board the "290," alias the Alabama.

On the 6th of August, the Harriet Pinckney, steamer, 311 tons, Hagen, commander, Rayson & Rees, brokers, cleared out for Nassau; chief shippers, Messrs. Syzer & Haywood, Campbell & Co., Sinclair, Hamilton & Co., Rayson & Rees, and Ely Brothers. She had on board 16 cannon with their carriages, and two howitzers, 260 iron shrapnel shells, 400 swords, 20 carbines, 540 muskets, 11,300 rifles, 2,000,000 percussion caps, and 1,500,000 ball cartridges.

On the 9th of November, the steamer Gladiator, Ward, master, Rayson & Co., brokers, cleared out for Tenerife, Nassau, and Honduras. Her cargo was shipped chiefly by Messrs. Syzer & Haywood. It comprised five packages shrapnels, one box and 100 pistols, one ton lead shot, 50 swords, 17,520 muskets, 1,000 boxes and 122,000 cartridges, 4,000,000 percussion caps, and 143,300 pounds gunpowder. This vessel succeeded in running the blockade.

On the 11th November the Justitia, steamer, 615 tons, Bannerman, commander; brokers, Syzer & Haywood; chief shippers, Richardson, Ross & Co., cleared out for Demerara. Her cargo of munitions of war comprised 10 cases shells, 400 barrels saltpetre, 20,000 linen bandages, 1,000,000 cartridges, and 179,200 pounds gunpowder. She also ran the blockade.

On the 9th December the Princess Royal steamer, 403 tons, Lawson, master, cleared out for Halifax and Vancouver's Island. Her brokers and chief shippers were Messrs. W. S. Lindsay & Co. She was loaded principally with hardware, iron and steel, machinery for six propellers, and soldiers' clothing; but she also took out 60,000 pounds of gunpowder.

On the 30 of January last, the Minion, a new and fast steamer, sailed from London. The shippers of her cargo were Messrs. Syzer and Haywood. It consisted of a large quantity of army stores, 25,000 rifles, 60 tons gunpowder, 3,012,000 cartridges, and 2,000,000 percussion caps. Up to within the last few days, her clearance papers were not entered at the Customhouse. She is supposed to be a Confederate vessel.

On the same day the Peterhoff, another steamer, also sailed from London, laden with army stores and necessaries, and her clearance papers were not to be found entered only a few days ago. The customs lists teem with cases similar to those enumerated. Surely the shipment to neutral ports of such vast quantities of material and munitions of war is in itself a sufficiently suspicious circumstance to justify the interference of the proper authorities to prevent violations of the law. Will the honorable member for Sunderland, (Hon. W. S. Lindsay,) whose name has been so frequently raised in the House in defence of the slaveholders' rebellion, have the temerity to affirm his ignorance of the nature of the transactions in which his name figures with disgraceful prominence? Will he deny that his officers in the City of London are the constant visitors of Charleston and other American ports, but especially Southerners, who tout there for hire in this contraband trade? The Government owes it to itself first, to its ally the Federal Government next, to prosecute and punish those who violate either the Queen's Proclamation, the Foreign Enlistment act, or the Customs regulations. It is simply incredible that it alone is not cognizant of facts notorious in commercial circles, and the evidence of which is more easily accessible to its agents than to lookers-on. The one circumstance is to be kept in view is, that these parties ship goods contraband of war, ostensibly to neutral ports, but with a full knowledge that they are intended for another destination, and that one which is not legally accessible to them; in other words, that they are going to blockaded ports. Here the subject is left for the present by, my lord, yours, &c.,

Escape of the Rebel Pirate Sumter from Gibraltar.

From the Gibraltar Chronicle, Feb. 7.

"The Sumter has got away at last," was very generally the first remark that struck the ear of those who went into the main street this morning—and, true enough, her place in the anchorage knew her no more. The evasion took place, it is said, at 6½ o'clock yesterday evening, in the dark interval between sunset and the rising of the moon. When the Sumter was sold by auction, some time ago, it was understood that the Government of the United States would not recognize the sale. Parties who had been previously in treaty for the steamer withdrew their offer on being made acquainted with this fact, and she was knocked down at the auction to a gentleman sent from England to purchase her. This person was the envoy of a Liverpool firm who were the financial agents of the Confederate Government, and the Federal Government coming to the very natural conclusion that the Sumter had been purchased, either on account of the Confederate Government, or as a private speculation, for the purpose of being freighted with a cargo to run the blockade, instructed the commanders of their cruisers to keep the most vigilant watch upon the Sumter, and seize her should she put to sea. The United States gunboat Chippewa has for the last month or two been as watchful as a lynx, cruising at the entrance of the Bay, and never losing sight of the Sumter. The consequence was, that the latter dared not make the attempt to put to sea, even during the long moonless nights of last month. But a conjuncture of circumstances that promised success to the attempt occurred yesterday, and the Sumter took advantage of the opportunity. A hard southeast gale compelled the Chippewa to leave the dangerous anchorage at Algeciras, where a heavy surf rolls on a dead lee shore, and to take refuge in Orange Grove Creek, at the head of the Bay. Instead of the two steamers leaving their anchorage abreast in a race for the Straits, this move gave the Sumter a couple of miles start, her anchorage being so much nearer to the entrance of the Bay. The easterly gale favored the Sumter in other ways. She is light and goes well under canvas, but cannot trust her machinery, and, with the aid of the gale astern would probably have forereached upon the Chippewa if her departure had been discovered and she had been chased. But the strength of the gale, the thickness of the atmosphere and the darkness of the night made it next to impossible that her movements should be seen; and, moreover, whether by accident or design, another steamer, the Hope, with her funnel painted exactly like that of the Sumter, anchored near her. The Sumter yesterday was warped alongside the Britannia steamer. It was reported in town that she had dragged her anchors and sustained serious damage from collision with another vessel. Carpenters were sent from the shore, and it was said that she would not be ready for sea for a week at least. Many believe that the anchor-dragging, collision and carpentering were all parts of an artful dodge to throw the Chippewa off her guard. If they were so, the dodge would probably have had the opposite effect of rousing suspicion and stimulating the Chippewa to extra vigilance. Darkness and the gale were the real friends that favored the escape of the Sumter.

OPERATIONS ON THE MISSISSIPPI.

The Expedition to Lake Providence.

The Project of Cutting a Canal to Connect the Mississippi with the Red River.

From Our Own Correspondent.

Headquarters Reinforcement Army Corps, Lake Providence, Monday, Feb. 23, 1863.

Yesterday morning, Feb. 22, the fleet of thirteen steamers, having on board Gen. John A. Logan's division of Maj.-Gen. McPherson's army, the Seventeenth Army Corps, left Memphis on their way to Lake Providence, to assist in carrying out the novel project of cutting a canal from the Mississippi into the head-waters of the navigable streams which empty into the Red River, and thence into the Mississippi, nearly three hundred miles south of this place. On the flagship Superior were Brig.-Gen. Logan, commanding the division; Maj.-Gen. J. B. McPherson, commanding this corps of the army, and their respective Staffs.

Yesterday being Washington's birthday, a meeting was organized to celebrate it in a becoming manner. Maj.-Gen. McPherson was called to preside, assisted by the representative of a New-York Daily.

The ceremonies were initiated by the whole company singing that stirring old hymn "America." A great number of patriotic toasts were then proposed and responded to by speeches from the various members of the two Generals Staffs.

The speeches were all patriotic, as they always are, and could not well be otherwise on such a memorial day.

But the most pollcable feature was the unequivocal condemnation by every speaker of the traitorous and revolutionary proceedings of the "Copperheads," the "Secession Democrats" at Springfield, Ill., and at Indianapolis. The majority of the army officers of the best were residents of Illinois and Indiana, and to them the treasonable doings at home are peculiarly mortifying, because, aside from its being treason against the Government, wounds their State pride. Gen. McPherson and Gen. Logan were particularly outspoken in their sentiments in that regard. Gen. McPherson said: "All we need to insure success in our arms, to insure the fall of Vicksburgh, and the consequent crushing out of the rebellion in the West, is the moral support of the people at home."

Gen. Logan, a Democrat, and once a strong Pro-Slavery man, used the strongest terms of denunciation in regard to the peace-preaching party at home—called them "sophers" said "they are as much rebels as those are whom we were now going to fight," and that they ought to be dealt with in the same manner. He was for carrying out the Emancipation Proclamation to the full extent of its meaning, and, if need be, of arming the slaves to assist in subduing their rebel masters, who were to-day doing all that lay in their power to prove that Washington had lived and fought in vain. These sentiments were echoed by every one of the dozen speakers. In all other respects, the celebration of Washington's birthday passed off with the usual songs, toasts and enthusiasm customary on such occasions.

In regard to the project of cutting a canal to connect the Mississippi at this point with the Red River, which empties into it again below Natchez (thus actually making an Island three hundred miles long and fifty miles wide on the eastern boundary of the State of Louisiana,) though it may at first thought seem somewhat visionary, looks more feasible on becoming better acquainted with the curious nature of this country and the singularity of its water-courses.

The strip of territory west of the Mississippi, from Helena, Ark., to the Gulf, and on an average seventy-five miles in breadth, is low and flat, a great portion of it being cypress swamp, through which a labyrinth of tortious and bewildering water-courses wind their way. Sometimes sluggishly flowing in opposite directions within a few hundred yards of each other, but finally emptying their waters into streams at points hundreds of miles apart. "Bayou Macon," which it is proposed to connect with the Mississippi by a canal of only a quarter of a mile in length, is a curious instance of this interlacing of the streams of Louisiana. Before the war, steamboats of three hundred tons burden, used to leave New-Orleans, ascend the Red River, and—going viâ the Onachita, the Black and the Tensas Rivers—enter Bayou Macon, which they ascended, converging toward the Mississippi, to a point twenty miles in the rear of the town of Lake Providence on the Mississippi River. The cutting of a canal, only a few hundred yards in length, is all that is necessary to extend this navigation into Lake Providence, which would enable steamboats to come to the town of Lake Providence, only about a quarter of a mile from the Mississippi River.

At this point, the level of the water in the Mississippi is fifteen feet above that of the water in the Lake, and it is through this neck of land that Gen. McPherson is cutting a canal which will be completed in a week or ten days. The ground on which the town of Lake Providence is built is much lower than the surface of the water in the Mississippi, and is only prevented from overflowing the town by the levee which is built along the river bank. When the time comes for allowing the water to flow through the canal, it will go through in a terrific flood that will sweep away the town and submerge hundreds of plantations along the borders of the lake.

The strategic object in view in opening this route of navigation—which requires a description as long-winded, to make one acquainted with it, as its own course is tortuous and long winding—is to transfer a portion of this army to the river below Vicksburgh, so they can cooperate with Gen. Banks in the reduction of Port Hudson. This will allow Banks' army to come up the river, and cooperate in the siege of Vicksburgh.

The only reason that troops cannot be sent to Port Hudson from the detachments that are camped immediately below Vicksburgh, is that we have no transports on the river between Vicksburgh and Port Hudson, and the shores are too swampy to admit of an army's marching down by land, and the batteries at Vicksburgh and Port Hudson prevent transports being sent to that portion of the river.

THE YAZOO PASS EXPEDITION.

MOON LAKE THE RENDEZVOUS OF THE EXPEDITION.

A correspondent of the Chicago Times, writing under date of Moon Lake, Miss., Feb. 22, says:

"Moon Lake is a small lunated sheet of water, about eight miles in length, with an average width of half or two-thirds of a mile, and bearing unmistakable indications of having at some past time been a section of the bed of the Mississippi River. It lies directly east of the Mississippi, and is reached through a very narrow and difficult pass, about a mile in length, forming the eastern end of the Yazoo Pass. To speak as intelligently as possible, I should say that the Yazoo Pass runs through this lake. It enters it from the Mississippi at the northern end, and leaves it again at about its centre. In passing from the river into the pass, there is a ridge, or narrow ban, to be crossed, immediately beyond which the pass makes a short, right-angular bend to the left. The water flows over the ridge with wonderful velocity, almost resembling a cataract, and a steamer has to be precisely handled to prevent its being thrown into the woods just beyond the ridge by the velocity of the current. But after crossing this ridge, and turning the bend to the left, the channel by the lake is very straight and easy of navigation, having a uniform depth of about three fathoms, with a current at this present time of not far from four miles an hour. The only trouble is in the narrowness of the stream, which affords no opportunity for vessels moving in opposite directions to pass each other, and requires skillful piloting to keep them out of the woods that line its edges, it has no banks. The width between the timber scarcely exceeds 75 feet, though occasionally pieces may be found, of short length, where it widens out to 100 feet. About midway of this place is the great Mississippi levee, built by the State in 1856, to shut up this channel, and receive large tracts of land in the interior of the State that had formerly been annually inundated by the water of the Mississippi River flowing off through this outlet. This levee is one of the largest and finest to be seen in the Mississippi Valley. It was built at a great expense, and with an outlay of a vast amount of labor. Its destruction at the point where it crosses the channel of the pass was but the work of a day by a small detachment of our troops. They had only to cut a small hole in it to start the water, when the rapid current and vast volume of water soon tore away the rest, making the gap of equal width with the pass itself.

After reaching the lake, there is no further trouble until we again enter the pass leading on to the Cold-water River. The lake, as I have said above, has about the same width as the Mississippi River, and has now a uniform depth over its whole area sufficient to float the largest class of steamers. It is a very picturesque and beautiful sheet of water, the entrance to and exit from which, being so very narrow and through thick woods, can scarcely be seen a hundred yards away from their mouths. The shores are high and dry. On the eastern bank there are two or three fine plantations; but, with these exceptions, the surroundings are an unbroken forest. Its isolation, and consequent quiet, have made it a great resort for aquatic birds of all kinds. Wild ducks and geese abound here in profusion. Occasionally a swan is seen. Pelicans and gulls fly about over its surface with the utmost freedom. The water being deep, cool, and comparatively clear, abounds with fish of all kinds. In fact, the place is a very paradise for sportsmen—or, rather, I should have said, was prior to the advent of this fleet into its quiet waters. So unusual a sight as large steamers, puffing and snorting about, has frightened much of the game away, and even the fishes manifest a shyness now, as if they, too, had become alarmed by the disturbance of the waters.

Such is the rendezvous for this expedition. It is but about eight miles from Helena, from which place vessels can be sent at any time, as they may be got ready, and avoid exposure to the investigations and observations of spies. A casual observer at Helena can form no possible idea of the character or magnitude of this expedition, as he can see but one or two boats at a time, and everything is left to guess whether they are intended for this movement or not. And on this I base my strongest hopes for the success of this movement. The enemy, through our own recklessness, carelessness, or treachery, have had timely information of our intention to send an expedition down this Pass; but as yet we have every reason to believe that they are in total ignorance of the magnitude and formidable character of the expedition. I do not give them credit for sufficient guiltiness to believe that we contemplate sending heavy iron-clad gunboats—some of the largest of our fleet—down this narrow and difficult pass, and there they will be prepared to see us approach with any great number of gunboats of any kind. Not yet can they be expected to anticipate the approach of large steamers, loaded with soldiers and artillery, through this route, which has never before been navigated by anything but flatboats propelled by the force of the current and guided by hand. Rendezvousing, therefore, in this secluded spot, where there is no likelihood of being seen by the enemy, there is every reason to anticipate that when we move forward in a body and come upon them, we shall take them completely by surprise. At least I hope so.

If we do not take the enemy by surprise,—if they shall chance to be fully informed of the nature and extent of our preparations, and shall be fully prepared to meet us,—God help us! There will be no escape for any of us. When we advance beyond this rendezvous, there is no return for us. The pass from here to Coldwater is much narrower and infinitely more tortuous, with a more rapid current than that leading from the Mississippi into the lake. Once through that, we can never get back again through it. The gunboats would become an insuperable impediment to our return, did none other exist. Our only chance, then, is to fight our way through to Vicksburgh. The only watchword we can have will be, "Fight or die."

It was in the stretch beyond this lake, leading to the Cold water River, that the enemy sought to obstruct the channel so as to prevent our boats from getting through. The distance is not far from fifteen miles by the course of the Pass. Throughout this distance they filled the channel with logs, trees, stumps, and all manner of obstacles. Our troops have been at work nearly three weeks in clearing out these obstructions and in cutting away the timber that overhangs the stream. They are not through with this labor yet, though just how far they have got I am not able to say. They have been much annoyed in their labors by small parties of rebels, who hover about in the woods and fire upon them. So great did this annoyance become that a Battalion of the Fifth Illinois Cavalry was finally sent down to scour the banks and drive back the enemy. A detachment of this cavalry had quite a brisk skirmish on Friday with a company of about sixty mounted rebels, finally dispersing them, and killing six of their number, wounding several more, and capturing twenty-six prisoners. Our loss was but trifling, amounting to but five or six wounded."

THE LOSS OF THE INDIANOLA.

Additional Interesting Particulars—How the Rebel Rams Gained the Advantage.

Cincinnati, Thursday, March 5.

Some additional particulars of the capture of the Indianola have been received. When she was attacked, the advantage was on the side of the rebel rams. The Indianola moved slowly, compared with them. They kept clear of her bow, where her best guns were, and butted the sides and stern.

The Indianola kept changing her guns from side to side, but as fast as this was done the active assailants gained the opposite side, and in the boldest manner butted her again. The Indianola had a coal barge on each side. These were sunk immediately. At length Capt. Brown announced the boat in a sinking condition, and surrendered. The action lasted about twenty minutes.

It is reported at Lake Providence that the Indianola was sunk by her crew to escape capture.

THE INDIANOLA SAID TO BE SUNK.

Washington, Thursday, March 5.

Rebel official reports show that the Indianola was seriously damaged before they got her, and is now lying sunk in the river some distance below Vicksburgh.

A CONTRADICTORY REPORT FROM MEMPHIS

Memphis, Tuesday, March 3.
via Cairo, Thursday, March 5.

The Indianola was captured under circumstances that lead to the belief that she was unnecessarily surrendered. Last Friday, the Indianola and Queen of the West were discovered under the guns at Warrenton, both in a condition for effective service.

The sickness in the army is increasing.

The canal between the Mississippi River and Lake Providence is finished. The water is not yet let in.

IMPORTANT FROM TENNESSEE.

The Enemy Under Van Dorn Advancing.

OUR FORCES ALSO ON THE MOVE.

Heavy Skirmishing at Last Accounts.

Nashville, Thursday, March 5.

The enemy under Van Dorn advanced again toward Franklin yesterday. The Federal force also advanced six miles and drove the rebels back. Two men were wounded. The rebels lost 12 killed. The fight was renewed this morning. No particulars have been received.

Twenty-three men of Col. Jackson's Tennessee regiment, while on picket duty west of Nolan'sville, were attacked by fifty Confederate cavalry, who tried to surround and capture them. The Tennesseans, after twenty minutes' fighting, compelled the rebels to surrender, took the whole party prisoners, and arrived in this city last night.

Reinforcements for Gen. Granger at Franklin have been sent forward sufficiently large to destroy or capture Van Dorn's command.

It is reported that about 1,000 rebel cavalry are in the vicinity of Harper's Shoals, waiting to attack steamers on the river.

Hon. Connelly F. Trigg, Judge of the United States District Court, has ordered that no attorney, proctor, or other person who has not taken the oath to support the Constitution of the United States, will be permitted to manage or conduct cases in this Court.

A Sharp Skirmish near Murfreesboro—Defeat of the Rebels.

Dispatch to the Chicago Times.

Murfreesboro, Tenn., Tuesday, March 3.

The brigade of regulars from Gen. Rosecrans' division went out on a foraging expedition yesterday morning, and encountered the enemy, posted in force, about sixteen miles distant on the Salem Pike. Our forces consisted of the following: One battalion of the Fifteenth Infantry, Capt. Kizellas; one battalion of the Sixteenth, Capt. Carter; two battalions of the Eighteenth, Capts. Douglas and Fullerman; and one battalion of the Nineteenth—the whole under command of Col. Sheperd, Fifteenth United States Infantry. A section of Gunther's battery accompanied the infantry. The expedition moved out from Murfreesboro at 7 A. M., and proceeded without interruption to the vicinity of Eagleville. Here it was ascertained that a strong body of the enemy's cavalry were awaiting our approach. Col. Sheperd instantly ordered our force in take the proper positions, and, with a strong line of skirmishers thrown to front and flank, advanced steadily and cautiously upon the enemy's position. In a few moments our skirmishers engaged the enemy's outposts, and immediately thereafter the rebels moved quickly to the front and advanced across the front line of our skirmishers. A hot engagement ensued, and lasted for about ten minutes, when the enemy, unable to endure the galling fire of the regulars, broke and fled. They were shortly afterward got into a second line of battle, and, with heavy reinforcements, ventured a movement on our right, with the evident intention of assailing us by flank and rear. This design also failed, and our forces repulsed the assailants a second time. They did not again make a stand, but made a hurried retreat, even leaving behind their dead, of whom there were several. We took no prisoners, but the enemy's loss is killed and wounded is supposed to be considerable.

THE CONSCRIPTION BILL.

The New Bill for Raising Armies—What It Is, and What It Promises.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

Washington, Sunday, March 1, 1863.

The Senate, last night, after a protracted debate, concurred in the amendments made by the House to the bill to organize the militia of the United States. It is a strange circumstance, that after permitting the bill to pass the Senate, and even voting for it, that class of Senators who consider the Constitution from a Southern aspect, finally found breath to sound their opposition only when the bill came back for amendment in one or two matters, which did not in the slightest affect the principles of the measure, and which, in reality, rounded off one or two of its sharpest corners. It goes now to the President, and will, doubtless, become a law before the final adjournment.

There is an undreamed of power in this bill—undreamed of less than a year ago. It is not in the numbers that it adds to the available forces of the Government. It is not in the extraordinary powers which it confers. It is not in its comprehensive details, nor in all these combined that will be found the great good which will come of the most gigantic innovation upon established usage that has ever been recorded. The life-spring principle of the bill is in its very title—in the declaration by which the distinctions of imaginary lines are swept away, and the repudiation of a heresy which bred the necessity for such a law. Fighting against rebellion, which is sought to be justified by the declaration of State Rights, and organizing, equipping, governing its armies upon a principle which was nothing but a recognition of the doctrine which gave birth to its armed assailants. This is what the Administration has been doing from the beginning. Bending to State demands—standing motionless on the air-drawn borders of small and great States, and begging of the Executives of a few arbitrary divisions of territory the privilege of drawing upon the resources of the country for the support of the parent that raised them. The friends of the Republic will have cause for exceeding great joy that at last this fatal barrier has been broken, and the fact proclaimed that the country is a nation—divided into sections only for the convenience of local interests, and always with the understanding that these divisions are to melt away whenever rebellion or invasion shall render it essential for the common good that such boundaries be forgotten. This is the fundamental, underlying principle of the bill for the enrollment of the militia of the United States. It is, I confess, a startling reversal of the almost settled theories of the country—but if it kills, it kills only that upon the heretofore barren soil, where dwarfed shrubs of decentralization struggled for existence, there may grow up a giant nation, vigorous to resist and mighty to protect.

The details of the bill, though so greatly overshadowed by the principle it initiates, are, however, equal to the necessities of the hour. Its provisions are broad and comprehensive, and, if rightly administered, it will do away with all necessity for the interposition of any others than those charged with the prosecution of the war.

It is not new organizations, new regiments and new officers that are wanted. The evil of fresh regiments with inexperienced officers, has well nigh been the destruction of the army. It has cost millions of dollars, thousands of lives, months of fatal delays and the loss of fruitful opportunities. Here again came over the army and the nation, the blast of that upas tree—State authority. To the estimated necessities of localities, to the ambition of men, and all the illiteracies of partizanship—to the making of all things political, from the Supervisor of a town up to the return of a Senator of the United States—for the benefit of all the intermediate legislators, judges, representatives in Congress, mayors of cities and governors of States—to the packing of Conventions and to the greasing of the machinery of party organizations—to all these, as well as to the paramount ends of an almost useless cluster of go-betweens, has the Army of the Nation been made subservient. Commissions, from Colonels down, have been held up to the purchase of those who could best pay, either in money or in kind. "Give me something for this," has been the vulture cry, and those who could give have bought. Look down the registers of the men who command, and trace, as you can easily do, the price so many have paid. It may not be in palpable figures, but, nevertheless, the figures are there. Said a Governor of a State, early last Fall, to a man who had served, faithfully and well, up from the ranks to the Captaincy of a Company almost dictated in the field. "Come to me, and you shall have the command of one of the new cavalry regiments I am to 'organize.'" After waiting a reasonable time, and hearing nothing more, the Captain went home to his State, to see the Governor. The Governor was, to say the least, frank. "Oh," said he, "I cannot possibly fulfill my promise. The fact is, I was run so hard last Fall that I had to promise all the positions I had to gentlemen of influence." This is one of a thousand cases that I could recite—but even one is one too many. I could name you instances where boys of nineteen have been sent with field commissions to regiments whose officers had been killed on the desperate fields of Fair Oaks and Antietam. Governors in executive chambers make such selections, but Generals and Colonels, lighted by the blaze of the enemy's cannon, will find different material out of which to make their subordinate officers. That Governors, who know nothing of the merits of contests, have been set aside, and men whose interests make them careful, have been substituted, so the appointing power, though it may lessen the Executive stature, will give strength and vigor alike to the soldier and the commander.

A kindred evil is also squelched by that provision of the bill which prevents the army from being at times an aggregation of town meetings. "Election of officers." Do you know what a curse that has been? To be sure, it has been practically ignored at all times, when it has suited the convenience of Governors to be oblivious of that right which is nominally given to the enlisted men. But, nevertheless, the principle has remained, and in many instances has been practiced. Electioneering at home is bad enough—pot-house politicians in pot-houses are pitiable sights. I need not ask you a second time to say "yea" to those two propositions. But electioneering at home is commendable compared with electioneering in camp. A pot-house is a paradise, and pot-house politicians are lords of the manor, compared with a tent for the arena and soldiers for the canvassers. Discipline! You may as well talk to the northeast wind as to talk discipline to men whose votes are to be sought by the disciplinarian, whose commission may depend upon the "sweet voices" of those to be restrained. Under the old order of things—it was human nature that it should be so—he who favored most was most favored. Under the new order of things, those who enforce obedience will be best rewarded, and the man will be relieved from the sentiment, the bickering, the demoralization of camp canvassing. And for that reason they will be better led, better cared for, better organized, and more efficient. While a fresh ed selections will be made by the Generals, the many will be of the best. You may say that it is hard to so decide against the right of the men to select—against the right of Governors to appoint. But readers, soldiers and Governors must recollect that the right to choose is the normal right of peace—a right that, like a thousand other rights, is engulphed by the relentless wages of war. Somebody has truly said, that "war is a terrible necessity." He might have added, "a necessity that knows no law." The voices of the governed are lost in the roar of the cannon—let them be silent until the governed have conquered peace, and they will come again to be heard. They are not dead, but sleeping.

If there is a necessity for a further increase of men—there can be but little occasion for more officers—the ranks of the old regiments will be filled up. The new recruits will be interwoven with the veterans of the Peninsula, of Shiloh, of Roanoke, at Pea Ridge, of Lexington, and Boston Mountain and Murfreesboro; having, by ready example, the drill, the discipline, the cool courage and efficiency of those who have survived battle-fields that have been made memorable by their valor and their endurance. So the officers who have won their spurs will have full ranks gathered under the old riddled banners. Shreds and patches they are; but, tattered and torn as they may be, they are worth all the flaunting standards of new regiments that could be sent to the front by all our Governors within the next year. So by the new law are preserved the historic recollections of the regiments that went out strong both in spirit and in numbers, but that now have only the daring will—the numbers, alas, sleeping where they foremost fell.

Another essential feature of the bill is that which provides for the arrest and return of the deserters of the past two years. This will prove a preventive in the future and a cure for the past. Do you know what an army of deserters could be gathered together in the States? Absenteeism has been as much the curse of the country and the army as it was of Ireland. It is not the poorest that have gone. It would be little if, here and there, only the lower grades left the field and the service. Unfortunately, however, in too many cases it is the well-to-do—those who have some position at home, and some little influence—that take leave of the camp. It is those who have the strength to get furloughs (and those who need them and do not get them) who overstay them, that constitute the bulk of the absentees. These, once returned to the army, would raise the aggregate available force more than one hundred thousand men, not counting those who are unfit for the labor and fatigue of the camp and the field. Think of such an increase of the army, without a draft, and then think if it will not go a long way toward rendering a draft unnecessary? The new law designated the machinery by which deserters may be sought out and returned. Returning deserters will deter from desertion. How much of crime is prevented by hasty execution to crime? Is it not the fear of detection, quite as much as conscience, that protects communities from depredations? At any rate, it is the dread of certain punishment, and the disgrace of being returned in durance, that will put a stop to absenteeism.

Congress has done well, in declaring principles and in framing provisions. Will the President, and those charged with the Executive powers conferred by the bill, prove equal to the enactment? I believe they will. Differ as men may about the policy which M

THE DEALER IN GOLD—EXCITEMENT IN THE CITY—INCIDENTS AND OBSERVATIONS.

Gold has fallen slightly. Yesterday was the day on which it fell, and to-day is the day on which it will continue to do so some more. Had Gen. Washington, or any other man twenty years deceased, been permitted to visit William-street yesterday, between the hours of 10 A. M. and 3 P. M., he would have opened his eyes in astonishment, and then in despair. Such a people he would think never before existed, and such insanity was never yet seen outside of a mad-house.

Regardless of Gen. Washington's opinion, however, yesterday was a great day in the Bullion Calendar. At no time within the recollection of the most assident memorandum-book has there been such tremendous excitement "at the Board" or "in the Street," as ranged there then. Early in the day it was observed by those who watched, that the evil day was upon them, and that Gold, so long the imperious arbiter of prices, was about to have a fall. The news spread, and every body in the City who had any of the article hastened frantically to the Bankers and Brokers to sell it. Starting at 165 it ran down to 152, then rallied up to 157, but fell back to the closing rate of 155. Thousands of old (literal) stockings were emptied of their contents by the tyro miners of our day, who, fearful lest gold should tumble down to its real value, hurried with it into unaccustomed places, and sold it quick at the then ruling rate, thanking the stars that at least they had made as much as they had; other small dealers, who were unable to carry their limited supply of the precious metal were compelled to get rid of it as best they might, and with dismal faces they joined the long row of those who were compelled to "go and do likewise," and thankfully took what the banker might at the moment of its offering be willing to give.

The streets were blockaded by people—thousands of them—every one of whom had gold in his pocket, and strange to say, wanted to get rid of it. William-street, between Exchange-place and Beaver-street, was so crowded that four extra-sized policemen, with clubs, could with difficulty periodically pass, and when they did, no attention was paid to them, save by some excited holder, who asked if they would take a small lot of gold. The bankers and brokers were busy enough, and took in the yellow-boys by shovelfuls, and tossed bags of them into their strong boxes, with an indifference remarkable to behold. No one seemed exempt from the excitement, and, for that matter, no one seemed unprovided with piles of that which, at other times, would make us all happy, but which, just now, it would seem dangerous to keep.

A sympathetic feeling pervaded the entire community, and everybody was continually asking everybody else what was the last quotation, and making small bets that it would be less before they heard again.

One good result was attained. Pork, beans, butter and cheese, flour and coal, being snobbishly inclined, followed the fashion, and when gold tumbled they fell too. Now, then, if Stewart will stop charging the ladies $2 for $1 gloves, and other tradesmen will call in their illegal shinplasters, and gold will keep on falling till it touches par, we will all be happy and comfortable, and the world will wag on as quietly as it did in the days of Old King Cole.

THE GOLD EXCITEMENT AND THE POLICE.

Yesterday the Police took into custody two brokers in gold, named Justus Hart and Leon Nassau. It appears that these two brokers lost largely in gold during the last two days, and yesterday, when that article went down to 58 per cent. premium, the two persons above named, in company with several others, became quite noisy, and in their excitement they blocked up the sidewalk in the vicinity of Wall and William streets, at the same time creating much disturbance in the neighborhood. They were taken before Justice Dowling, at the Tombs. When the accusation was made against them, they stated that recently they had lost very largely in the gold business, and they thought this should be a sufficient excuse for being excited in the street, and for obstructing the sidewalk. The Justice, after a thorough examination, discharged them with a severe reprimand. The affair created considerable sensation among the brokers in Wall-street.

Inspection of the Army Hospital at David's Island.

On Wednesday, Dr. McDougall, Medical Inspector of the Department of the East, accompanied by Dr. J. L. Smith, of Bedloe's Island Hospital, and Drs. Pease and Cash, of the hospital at Fort Schuyler, proceeded to David's Island, on the Government steamer Thomas P. Way, for the purpose of inspecting the army hospital at that place. The party were received by Dr. J. Simons, the surgeon in charge, and by him conducted through the various buildings. An elaborate description of this institution, and the systematic manner in which the duties are performed, have already been published at length in the columns of the Times. Within the past three months, some important additions have been made, and numerous improvements introduced. A neat and commodious chapel has just been completed which goes far to enhance the attractive features of the premises. The chaplain, Mr. Lowry, has won the esteem of all by his assiduous and well-timed efforts. A glee-club, composed of convalescents, has been formed since the first of the year. There is a skating pond on the Island, which was covered yesterday with hundreds of happy and joyous soldiers. It would be naturally supposed by the unacquainted that at such a place there could be little use for a fire-engine. But when he considers the numerous buildings and belongings to the Hospital, the necessity for such an apparatus will be perceived. There is now a regularly organized Fire Company, who have been provided by Government with an engine. Yesterday, the men appeared in red shirts and performed the evolutions of a drill much to the amusement and satisfaction of the spectators. The Hospital is situated seven miles above Fort Schuyler on the East River, and has accommodations for 2,000 patients. The patients number, at present, 700. The larger proportion are sick—every few suffering from wounds. Each ward is provided with a kitchen, besides which, there are four volunteer kitchens, from which are dispensed on a surgeon's order, the delicacies and favorite dishes kept in by friends of the institution. There has not been a single death in the Hospital during the past six weeks. The patients are cheerful, contented and happy. Numerous walks have been laid out on the island, by means of which a copious supply of water is furnished all the wards. Dr. Simons, the surgeon, [illegible] surpasses Dr. McDougall, [illegible] of every portion of the establishment, [illegible] favorably impressed [illegible] hospital management.

Inspection of the Army Hospitals in Newark.

Yesterday Dr. McDougall extended his tour of hospital inspection to the institutions at Newark. The examination commenced with the large hospital in close proximity to the railroad depot. The building, formerly used as a tanning and currying establishment, was at first engaged for hospital purposes by [illegible] was taken of their hands [illegible] At the last [illegible] Summer it contained 700 patients, which is the full complement. The number of patients now within the institution is 120. They are nearly all convalescent, and in a short time will rejoin their regiments. The building contains three spacious wards comprising the upper stories, the first floor being used for offices and laboratories. The wards are well ventilated, which is a great consideration [illegible] is obtained, and is supplied with a sufficient quantity of water, which is forced into tanks on the upper floor by means of a steam engine.

The dining-room is on the basement floor, as is also the kitchen. A thorough renovation is now being made, and scores of men are at work whitewashing, painting, &c. Another hospital is situated a short distance up the railroad. The building was formerly used as a hatchet manufactory, and is divided up into numerous small wards. The number of patients has been reduced to 150. The two hospitals together will accommodate 1,500 men. The general arrangements and appointments are not so convenient as those of David's Island and Fort Schuyler hospitals. This may be accounted for from the fact that the buildings were not originally constructed for the purpose as present applied to them. Much of the heavy machinery used by the former occupants is still standing. With the conveniences and facilities at hand, Dr. George Taylor, the Surgeon in charge, and his assistants, have done all that possibly could be done. The patients are in good spirits, and appear perfectly contented. Several lying upon the cots were addressed by Dr. McDougall in person. This attention was not unappreciated, and many an eye was observed to brighten as the Doctor advanced to administer his kindly offices. The Doctor returned to this City in the 3 P. M. train. He remarked that a perceptible improvement had been made in the hospitals since the time they were first occupied.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

Strong War Talk—Burning of the Jacob Bell Considered—Enlargement of the Canals, &c.

The regular monthly meeting of the Chamber of Commerce was held yesterday, at 1 P. M., the President, Fredericks Penn, Esq., in the Chair.

The Chamber elected the following new members: Wm. T. Blodgett, C. C. Woolworth, Alex. W. Bradford, Alfred Edwards and Wm. Orton.

The Secretary, Mr. J. Austin Stevens, Jr., read a communication from the Secretary of the Navy in response to the memorial of the Chamber, requesting the presence of special war vessels to protect the harbor at the Narrows, and the entrance of the East River. Mr. Welles replied that the occupation of our naval vessels at present would not admit of compliance with the request of the Chamber; that there are always vessels of war temporarily in the harbor, and that, perhaps, the success of projected expeditions would enable the Department to detail vessels specially for the protection of the harbor; that the policy of the Government would, of course, be changed in case of a foreign war, but not, probably during the existence of our domestic difficulties, although the Department is fully alive to the dangers set forth in the memorial.

The Secretary also read a letter from the President's Secretary, acknowledging the receipt of the communication of the Chamber with reference to the occupation of the Rio Grande.

Also the letter of Mr. Seward, complying with a request to distribute the printed report of the proceedings of the Chamber relative to the continued depredations of piratical craft.

Also the letter of the Mayor, stating that he had referred to the Harbor Defence Committee the memorial of the Chamber on that subject, and detailing his official action on that subject, and the reasons therefor.

The Secretary gave a verbal report of his action as the representative of the Chamber at the meeting of the Commercial and Statistical Association of Washington. The Association had determined to hold a meeting in New-York on the 1st of May next, at which delegates were to be invited from the various Chambers of Commerce throughout the country. On motion, the use of the Chamber was granted for the meeting.

The Secretary also read a communication relative to the calling of a National Convention at Chicago, to consider the subject of enlarging the canals, and urging the Chamber to give the movement its hearty cooperation.

Mr. A. A. Low called the attention of the Chamber to a letter which he had received, recommending a subscription to fit out the Atlantic, Baltic and other steamers, under the new law, as privateers to catch the Alabama. He thought the letter should not be published, as it contained some reflections on the navy.

The Secretary read a letter from W. H. Aspinwall, recommending the appointment of Chief Engineer Joshua Follinsbee as Chief of the Board of Engineering in the navy—the position to which the Senate had refused to confirm Mr. Isherwood. The letter set forth the necessity of a fast navy to catch the pirates. It was referred to the Executive Committee.

The Secretary read a letter from Mr. A. Watson, explaining a new method of grappling the screws of screw steam vessels by the use of nets. It was not acted upon, as the subject was considered foreign to the scope of the Chamber.

The Chamber devoted some time to the discussion of a proposition to amend the by-law with reference to the calling of special meetings. The whole matter was tabled, on motion of Frederick M. Wetmore.

THE DEPREDATIONS OF THE PIRATES—BURNING OF THE JACOB BELL.

Capt. Nye offered a resolution authorizing the Executive Committee to report what measures it was proper for the Chamber to take with reference to so important an event in American commerce as the recent destruction of the ship Jacob Bell by a pirate fitted out and supplied in British ports.

Mr. S. B. Chittenden seconded the resolutions, saying that it was time that some means were provided for putting an end to these demaging and terrible piracies. He believed that such action on the part of American merchants would be responded to by multitudes in England.

Capt. Nye said that when he heard from the owner of the Jacob Bell (Mr. A. A. Low) in this chamber, a short time since, of the burning of the Seaman's Home, he little thought that he should have it brought home to him so soon. He had two nephews on board of that ship.

Mr. F. M. Wetmore said he thought it the duty of the Chamber to express its indignation at these piracies. Why did not the Chamber take active measures with a view to expose the misconduct of English merchants? It was, in fact, England at war with us, while we are at peace with England—and, in fact, another battle-starving operatives. He recalled the forcible picture drawn by Mr. Low, of the horrible practice likely to be occasioned by these outrages, of avoiding ships burning at sea, in the natural dread of encountering pirates.

Capt. Nye, in response to a question as to what vessels are available for the pursuit of the pirates, stated that the Atlantic, Baltic and Illinois could be had. They were, it was true, sidewheel steamers, and not calculated to cope with vessels like the Alabama, but, he thought it would be well to make the attempt.

Mr. Johnathan Sturges quoted from a morning paper which complained of the persistent introduction of this matter into the Chamber, to show that there was not a general appreciation of the importance of the subject.

Mr. Stoddard thought action was worth much more than resolutions. He favored the immediate fitting out of a vessel, under the recent act of Congress, expressing the opinion that the pirates might be captured in six weeks. He would not be surprised to hear, any day, that the pirates had made their appearance in, and insulted, the harbor of New-York.

Mr. Cammann thought Mr. Stoddard had hit the nail on the head. He had convened with twenty gentlemen who wanted to take stock in just such an enterprise as the proposed privateer expedition. He called the attention of the Chamber to the prediction made by Mr. Low, in October last, that a burning ship would be the signal for a sailor to flee for fear of pirates, recalling the fact that the Jacob Bell had been seen, when burning, by the Captain of a vessel which dared not approach her, and arrived safely at New-Bedford, reporting that he would have gone to the burning ship had he not feared the Alabama.

ADDRESS OF THE OWNER OF THE JACOB BELL.

Mr. A. A. Low said he was not aware that such a motion would be presented to the Chamber to-day. He was glad to see the attendance of members drawn in the topic. He had spoken several times in deprecation of the conduct of England [illegible] in permitting vessels like the Alabama to go forth to destroy our commerce. It was a question when he was [illegible] proposal wrong [illegible] that. [illegible] our own citizens, having in view the interests of our country, and because he believed that such statements, our wrongs would have an influence upon public opinion, and, through public opinion, upon Great Britain; that he had faith in Great Britain when the Government of that country should come to consider the enormities that had been perpetrated against our country. It would not, and did not, add to the intensity of his feelings that the experience which belonged to others, was now his own. He regretted the matter previously had not so he did before. He thought it demanded of this Chamber a consideration of the consequences of these acts, as functions in themselves, and as unworthy of continuance on the part of a Government like Great Britain. That was the positive he had in bringing the subject before the Chamber, that by calling attention to it at time, they might do their duty. He had felt for some time that public attention should be more earnestly directed to this thing; that this constant [illegible] was a growing which cannot be tolerated. It tends to war. We may disguise it as much as we please, but that is its tendency. He thought it time for England to consider that, if it takes all the vessels of our navy to arrest the ravages of the Alabama and Oreto, how many ships of the navy of Great Britain it would take to arrest the destructiveness of privateers, which would be fitted out in this country in case of war. He thought the tendency of these things was wrong, and it was time for Great Britain to consider how she would rid the sea of a thousand privateers of our enterprise, and our navy is unable to rid the sea of two. (Applause.) England may believe that our country is tried to the extent of all the energies to suppress the rebellion; but, if she should think upon this subject, (Applause,) The United States is able to put down the rebellion, (applause,) and, beyond suppressing the rebellion, to vindicate the character of the nation (applause) against any people who invade our rights. (Applause.) We have rights upon the ocean which have been violated, and it is known that they have been violated—known abroad as well as at home that international comity is not observed, that neutrality is not observed, that the spirit of neutrality has not observed. He thought it ought to be considered a partial gratification that we are not the only sufferers by the destruction of the Jacob Bell. There were six or seven thousand packages of the tea on board the vessel which were owned and insured entirely in England and France. (Applause.) He submitted the fact for the gratification of members of the Chamber, as well as for the information of many who rejoice at the destruction of the Jacob Bell, many in this city. (Applause.) He hoped the resolution would be adopted and supported by the voices of the gentlemen of the Chamber, as well as by those coming to our knowledge from day to day, proving that if nothing is done our commerce will be utterly swept from the sea. The resolution of Capt. Nye was unanimously adopted, and referred to the Special Committee on the Alabama.

Mr. Prime, Chairman of the Chamber, on taking the question, said that the present condition of things was much like our being at war with Great Britain, with the plundering all on their side. This condition of American commerce could not be much worse, if we were actually at war, for during war there would be an opportunity for capture on our part in reprisal. He cordially favored the resolutions.

Mr. F. M. Wetmore hoped they would have the armed privateer Avenger on the track of the pirates within ten days. On his motion, the Committee were authorized to cooperate with the Board of Underwriters.

CANAL COMMUNICATION BETWEEN THE MISSISSIPPI AND ATLANTIC.

The Chamber listened to some interesting remarks from Jonathan Sturges and C. B. Ruggles on the subject of enlarging our canal communication between the Mississippi and Atlantic.

Mr. Ruggles continued at some length to speak in favor of the Canal enlargement movement, and the Convention for that purpose to be held at Chicago in June.

Messrs. Ezra Nye and William S. Gaither also spoke in favor of the movement.

A resolution was adopted authorizing the President to appoint twenty-five delegates from the Chamber to the Chicago Convention.

Affairs at the Custom-House.

THE POSTAGE CURRENCY NO LONGER RECEIVABLE FOR DUTIES—COMMENTS ON THE COLLECTOR'S DECISION BY THOSE AROUND THE CUSTOM-HOUSE—GOLD RECEIPTS.

Quite an excitement was occasioned last Tuesday, among importers and brokers, by the refusal of the Cashier at the Custom-House to receive the postage currency in payment of small sums of duty. Since the first issue of the currency, it has been customary to receive it for all sums of duty under five dollars, in accordance with that provision of the law authorizing its issue, which made them "receivable in payment of all dues to the United States less than five dollars." For some time past the premium on gold and Demand Notes has been so great, that merchants doing a large importing business have found it considerably to their advantage to avail of the privilege heretofore accorded them of using the postage currency in the payment of small sums. On every entry which passes the Custom-house, fees are to be paid, which are in all cases under $5. In payment of these the notes have been very convenient. The Cashier does not refuse, however, to receive the notes in payment of these fees. His orders from the Collector were to "receive no more postage currency for duty." It often happens that the importer will be required to pay such a sum that it is necessary to use small coin or fractional notes to make the exact amount. Persons familiar with the law under which the postage currency was issued, first believed that the order against receiving it for duties only applied to large sums, when importers desired to pay a portion of that sum in currency. For instance: an importer wishes to pay duty amounting to $248 25. Until Tuesday he would pay $240 in gold or demand notes, and $4 25 in postage currency. It was believed that the order was issued merely to enforce the payment of the whole sum in gold or demand notes. The law makes the currency receivable in payment of all dues to the United States less than $5, and it was said in support of the supposed decision of the Collector, not to receive it in such a case as the above, that the law says "of duty paid or to be paid"; that $244 25 was the amount to be paid, and certainly that was not less than $5. The decision of the Collector, however, was not confined to such a case as the above. If an importer wishes to pay $4 25 as the entire duty on any single entry, he must now pay it in gold or silver, as the Collector's decision has stated.

It is said that the cause of the attention of Mr. Barney being called to this subject was the action of one importer, who for some time past has entered his goods in small quantities, making many withdrawal entries for one invoice, so that the duty on each entry should fall below the prescribed amount of five dollars. By thus entering his goods, he has been enabled to pay his duties in postage currency, instead of being compelled to buy demand notes or specie. He has preferred to do this, even though each entry he had passed was subject to a stamp duty of fifty cents, and fees beside. In the aggregate, with gold at 70 per cent. premium, the saving was considerable.

It is said that the action of the Collector is sustained by another law than that already alluded to, which makes duties on imports payable in specie or demand notes.

The duties now received are, in great measure, in gold, the supply of demand notes having been almost exhausted. The receipts being at present quite heavy, the Government will be enabled to obtain from this source all the gold it may find necessary to use, in fulfilling the obligations imposed on it by Congress.

Action of the Harbor Defence Committee.

The Municipal Harbor Defence Commission held their third meeting yesterday, when the By-laws Committee presented a series of regulations for the Commission, which were received and adopted. They provide, among other things, for Standing Committees of four each on the subjects of "Water Defences," "Land Defences," "Ordnance," and "Conference and Correspondence." A discussion was had as to the best plan of action. Comptroller Brennan wished to give everybody a hearing who had ideas to express and plans to unfold in aid of their work. Councilman Jones wanted only the views of practical men, having a horror of the theories of inventors, who were already besieging him at his office. Alderman Boots wanted "the men of brains of the town" before them, who would afford them valuable views of the various methods of defence now in use. It was finally agreed that each member should invite one gentleman to lay his views before them at their next meeting. The Mayor named Admiral Paulding, the Comptroller named Gen. McClellan, Mr. Jones named Chief-Engineer Craven, of the Croton Department; Mr. Brennan named Capt. Ericsson, Mr. Boots named Wm. H. Webb, Esq., and Mr. Hardy named Col. Richard Delafield. No others were named. Adjourned till 6 o'clock P. M., on next Monday.

Extensive Operations of Counterfeiters.

A WARNING TO THE PUBLIC.

A well-concocted scheme to swindle the public by means of counterfeit $5 notes, purporting to have been issued by "The Highland Bank, of Hudson City," New-Jersey, was discovered on Tuesday night last in the Eighth Ward. About thirty of these notes were passed off upon shopkeepers and various retail dealers, in the neighborhood of Greene, Spring, Prince and Broome streets, before the fraud was discovered. A well-dressed young man, who gives his name as Simon McDougal, very prepossessing in his appearance, and, from his conversation, evidently of education, [illegible] Saturday afternoon, [illegible] purchase, [illegible] Saturday [illegible] Justice Quackenbush [illegible] Police Court, where he was committed by the [illegible] Ward, viz., John Graham, No. 94 Prince-street; Alexander Wise, No. 110 Prince-street; Saml. Graham, No. 161 Spring-street, and James Cuzner, No. 160 Prince-street, all of whom made complaints against McDougal, and testified that the accused, in company with two other young men, neither of whom has as yet been taken into custody, appeared [illegible] evening last, and in payment for a small quantity of goods had [illegible] $5 notes, which [illegible] purporting to have been issued by "The Highland Bank of Hudson City," N. J. The bills are so well executed and so much do they resemble the genuine one, and, moreover, there being no counterfeits on this bank issued in the vicinity, [illegible] of this City, that all were deceived by them. The paper is very fair, and the steel engravings upon the face of the bills is exceedingly well executed. Although we have received information that bills of this denomination were successfully passed in this City and Brooklyn to the amount of several thousands of dollars, we do not know of more than the three it is for, in addition to the one above mentioned. The accounts seem all hitherto fair transactions.

Eighth-avenue Railway Matters.

A large mass meeting was held on Tuesday night last at Carmansville, Washington Heights, for the purpose of taking action in the extension of the Eighth-avenue cars to Harlem River, in order to open that part of the City more conveniently to the citizens of Carmansville and Washington Heights.

Among those present were Hon. Mr. Knapp, D. H. Knapp, Prof. Peet, Thomas Manson, President, D. S. Jackson, Rev. J. Howard Smith, Isaac P. Martin, Wm. Johnston, Wm. T. Dixon, Alex. N. Lawrie, James Monteith, Warren Wilkinson, Capt. Harris, D. W. C. Ward, Robert Marshall, H. B. Perkins, Col. Wm. B. L. Barnes, John Dailey, J. Burnheimer, Wm. Dunning and Wm. E. Waring.

Mr. Knapp spoke at some length, and strongly reprobated the conduct of the Boards of Aldermen and Common Council for the delay in the progress of of the Eighth-avenue railroad to Harlem River, in not compelling Messrs. Wheelock and Sarre to complete their contracts on the line. He also spoke strongly on the conduct of Alderman Boots for his inconsistent conduct in the whole affair.

Mr. Swartwhout reviewed the conduct of the Boards of Aldermen and Common Council in the matter, denounceing and condemning the movements of Alderman Boots, who had promised to do so much in their behalf, and had not done anything. If all failed, he said they would have the matter brought to Albany and see how it would be treated there.

Capt. Hazen followed Mr. Swartwhout and spoke in a similar strain.

Gen. Wm. B. L. Barnes was the next speaker, and his address was a very stirring and condemning one. From beginning to end, he stated that no greater injustice could be done a people than that which was meted out toward the respectable inhabitants of the west end of the City of New-York. The Eighth-avenue Railroad should long since have been running its cars to Harlem; but this was prevented, by the shameful manner in which the contractors had acted. After giving the Board of Aldermen a candid notice, he called upon all present to come forward and let their grievances be known, by demanding an abrogation of the charter. Then and only then would they obtain justice, and be secured in their rights from Gotham Law's influence.

The meeting separated at a late hour, determined more than ever to agitate the question until the way was clearly opened from the Eighth-avenue Railroad to Harlem River, and thence to the City Hall.

Board of Education.

The Board of Education met Wednesday evening, Wm. E. Curtis, Esq., President, in the Chair.

The Committee on Sites and School-houses reported in favor of purchasing four lots of ground situated on the southerly side of West Twenty-third-street, commencing 200 feet west of the Seventh-avenue, for a new Grammar School in the Sixteenth Ward, at a cost of $30,000. The recommendation of the Committee was adopted.

The Board resolved to authorize the rebuilding of Public School No. 41, in Greenwich-avenue, in the Ninth Ward, next year.

The Finance Committee reported a recommendation of the general executive of economy by all the local Boards, as the amount set apart for Special Appropriations was $100 to 16; and the appropriations made on account to date, $71,895 15. Excess $61,531 60.

A report from the Committee on By-Laws, recommending the passage of a resolution in favor of the Board deferring action upon all reports and resolutions for two weeks from the date of their introduction, excepting salaries of teachers and janitors, and all sums less than $250, was laid over.

Croton Water Meeting at Carmansville.

A large and enthusiastic meeting of residents and property owners of Manhattanville, Carmansville, Fort Washington, Tubby Hook, &c., was held at Mills' Hall, Carmansville, Wednesday evening, to advocate the construction of a distributing reservoir for the upper end of the City.

Stephen Keape, Esq., presided, and a list of Vice-Presidents, comprising Messrs.

was announced, Lt. H. Myers acting as Secretary.

Petitions signed by the heads of the Institution for the Deaf and Dumb, Juvenile Asylum, Convent of the Sacred Heart, Insane Asylum, &c., and by numerous residents and property holders, were submitted.

The following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

That this part of the City has increased so rapidly in population during the past ten years, and the Croton Water has become to them a matter of absolute necessity.

That the advantages and benefit to the inhabitants, and the advance and prosperity of this part of the City, are the security against the spread of fire that will follow the introduction of the water will be almost beyond estimate.

That the water is at hand, but no provision has been made for its reception and distribution, and therefore the authorities are respectfully and earnestly requested to supply the reservoir and other facilities proper for this purpose.

Speeches were made in support of the object of the meeting, and urging the passage of the bill before the Legislature on this subject.

New-York Homeopathic College Commencement.

The third annual commencement of the New-York Homeopathic College took place at the hall of the Historical Society, corner Eleventh-street and Second-avenue, last evening. The hall was filled with lady and gentleman friends of the graduating class, who manifested the greatest interest in the proceedings. At 8 P. M., the exercises were commenced by prayer by Rev. Dr. Osborne, after which the degree of M. D. was conferred on sixteen young gentlemen students, by William Cullen Bryant, Esq., President of the Board of Council. The following are the names of the graduates:

Selling Postage Stamps.

New-York, Monday, March 2, 1863.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Some time since it was announced that, for the convenience of the public, a person would be in attendance nights at the United States Post-office in this City, to sell postage stamps, &c. For the past month such accommodation has been repeatedly refused, the person in attendance gruffly inquiring, "Why don't you buy your stamps by the dollar's worth?" As one of that [illegible] now and then, are without the [illegible] to mail a letter at night [illegible] accommodation," and do not see the necessity of leaving such an officer.

GENERAL CITY NEWS.

A Suggestion to Landlords.—The approach of the 1st of May already begins to be heralded by the conspicuous of those disagreeable words "to let," which one sees on almost every other dwelling in this City and Brooklyn. If landlords will only adopt the suggestion which has often been made but rarely followed, of cutting upon their rent-bulletins the price which they are instead of putting house hunters to the trouble of traveling a mile to see notices, or inquiring the inmates to answer the dolorous bell jingle, a day in the will accommodate all parties concerned, and be quite as likely to dispose of their houses as by following the old custom.

Reunion at Grammar School No. 53, Northern Ward.—The pupils of the Male Department of this school appeared last evening in a variety of exercises before a large and crowded audience of the friends and parents of the pupils. The various compositions, declamations, dialogues and especially the military drill of the two senior classes, were well received, and gave unbounded delight and satisfaction. The school is now a flourishing institution, and although opened but a few months, it has taken an enviable position among the public schools of our City.

Alleged Homicide in Mott-street.—Coroner Wilmot, yesterday, held an inquest upon the body of Bridget Farley, aged 23 years, a native of Ireland, who died at her residence, No. 134 Mott-street, from the result of injuries inflicted upon her by Owen Farley, her husband, while she was in a state of intoxication. Upon the rendition of the verdict the Coroner decided to hold the husband to bail in the sum of $1,500; in default of which he was committed to the Tombs to await the action of the Grand Jury.

A Worthy Presentation.—On Monday evening Lieut.-Col. Frederick T. Locke, Assistant Adjutant-General to Maj.-Gen. Meade, and who has been enjoying a brief furlough in this City, was agreeably surprised at discovering in the hall of his residence a package addressed to himself, containing a magnificent sword, with silver scabbard, inclosed in a rosewood case, epaulets, silver-leaf straps, sash, belt and a pair of silver spurs—all of which were the gift of some of the officers of the old Twelfth New-York Regiment and a few friends. On Tuesday evening Col. Locke entertained the donors and a limited number of other friends with a banquet. Speeches were made, toasts given, and responded to, and a pleasant time had generally. Col. Locke left for the seat of war last evening.

The Refurbishment of Bodies, Corner Greene and Houston Streets.—The site of the Associate Presbyterian Church, corner of Greene and Houston streets, destroyed by fire some months since, is being rapidly built upon by the purchaser, Mr. Sullivan, who intends erecting a factory on the spot where the church reties stood. The human remains in the vault beneath the church are now in process of removal to New-York Bay Cemetery. Mr. Wm. R. Thayer, Special Inspector, appointed by City Inspector Dunham, will superintend the removal. About thirty persons have made application to inter the bodies of their friends on their own account.

Psychological Lecture.—Prof. Brittan, who has been giving a series of philosophical lectures on the "Vital and Mental Functions," at Clinton Hall, Astor-place, accompanied by many most startling and laughable experiments on the minds, senses and nerves of motion in his hearers, will continue his course at the same place this evening, when a great number and variety of novel illustrations of mental power, will be exhibited.

Branch Telegraph Office.—A branch telegraph office has been opened by the American Telegraph Company at the office of the agent of the New-London and Boston steamboat line, Pier No. 39 North River, foot of Vestry-street. This new office meets the wants of the large number of business houses in that vicinity, and is another indication of the tendency of business toward up-town.

Gift to the Central Park.—Thomas Richardson, Esq., has presented to the Commissioners of the Central Park a bronze statue of a boy and swan, designed for a fountain. The statue was cast by the celebrated Gruss, of Berlin. It will shortly be put in place on the Park, and display a jet of water.

BROOKLYN NEWS.

The Dummy Engine.—The citizens of East New-York—being at the termination of Atlantic-avenue, upon which it is proposed to run the dummy engine, and against which the property-owners along the route protest—held a meeting at the Howard House on Wednesday evening, over which Mr. C. R. Miller presided. The discussion on the subject of the dummy was free to all sides, and views were expressed for and against. At the conclusion, a series of resolutions were adopted favorable to the dummy. The resolutions are to be sent to the members of the Legislature from Kings County and to the Aldermen of the City of Brooklyn.

The Recent Counterfeiting Case.—Jeremiah Cowgill, arrested some days since on the charge of manufacturing counterfeit bills on the Bank of Westfield, Mass., was brought before Justice Feast, yesterday, for examination, but defence not being ready, the case was postponed until Tuesday of next week. The young man, Richard Taylor, arrested as an accomplice, (in the employ of the accused as a printer, at specified wages,) was released on bonds to appear as a witness on the examination.

The Fifty-sixth Regiment.—At a recent election for officers of the Fifty-sixth Regiment, (militia,) John G. Adams was chosen Lieutenant Colonel, and John A. Walsh Major.

NEW-JERSEY.

Appointments by Gov. Parker.—Gov. Parker has made the following appointments, which have been confirmed by the Senate: Judges of Court of Errors and Appeals—G. F. Foss, vice J. Ridley, resigned; E. L. B. Wales, vice Joseph Swain, term expired. Trustee of Normal School—W. A. Wintersmith.

Newark Union League.—The Union League of Newark is making preparations for a mammoth public meeting of the loyal citizens of Newark and vicinity. Gens. Butler and Hamilton have been invited, and other eminent gentlemen will be written to.

Newark Common Council.—The regular monthly meeting of the Common Council of Newark will be held at the City Hall this afternoon and evening.

England's Encouragement of the Rebellion.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

On reading, this morning, the article from the London Daily News, I turned directly to the editorial page for your comments, and found them. Just they are, and American, as always. Excuse my presumption—they do not seem to me to go far enough, are too brief, and too moderate in tone for the occasion. Allow me to disgorge my spleen. I shall have readers and applauders, rely upon it.

You call for a demand for explanations and a discontinuance of the underhand hostility revealed to us in the News. But what good will it do? The British Government interfered with respect to the Alabama—but, too late. The Oreto was arrested for a time in New-Providence—but sufficient cause was not found to detain her. Nothing will be done in the present case until every ship of the rebel navy has sailed.

Has any of us forgotten the record of Copenhagen? In the year 1807, on a mere supposition that Napoleon would get possession of the Danish fleet, the British Ministry had the effrontery to propose its temporary surrender to the custody of Great Britain. The Crown Prince refused with indignation. How could he also, were he not a coward or a slave? And for this assertion of a God-given independence, and in the mere intention of preventing conjectured aid to their enemy, the British, without further pretension, shelled his capital, and, when the horrors of this unjustifiable bombardment had compelled capitulation, carried off the whole fleet, with everything appertaining to it, to England. Were we building vessels, or suffering them to be built, even one or two, far more a navy, to serve against any one of her enemies, how long would England leave our dockyards unassailed? Situated as we are, fighting a foe whom we have suffered to arm himself offensively and defensively, while on one side stands England and the other France, watching for an opportunity to strike in, and caring little which side gets the better, so that they are advantaged, what can we do? Disappointed in the Trent imbroglio, which we will remember England exultingly proclaimed, though the many voices of her most incident Press, was to carry our navy from the seas, she is determined to do through the traitor-rebels what she has no further pretext for doing directly, and not all our protests will make her move one jot in compliance with arrangement—until it be too late, and then we shall have the old hypocrisy to swallow and to nauseate us. But if we do more than remonstrate—if we make as much as even a show of war—what then? My word for it, the challenge will be accepted, and Great Britain and the bastard Confederacy either will do more certainly what otherwise the Confederacy must effect alone, with Britain's aid—the dangerous thing her quiver and helping nerve from fresh arrows.

The Original Sin in Europe is Hatred of Freedom. Take this to extend

Resolved, That the Board do now adjourn.

Which was carried.

Commissioner Kennedy moved that the Board do now adjourn.

Which was carried.

Whereupon, the President declared that the Board stand adjourned until Saturday, seventh inst., at two o'clock, P. M. JAMES M. SWEENEY, Clerk.

Notes of Prize Decisions.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT.

Before Judge Betts.

The United States vs. The Schooner Florida.—This vessel was captured by the Matthew Vassar, on Jan. 11, 1863, at sea, near Little River Inlet, off the coast of North Carolina. No one appeared to defend the suit. The vessel was a British vessel, with a register to H. R. Saunders, of Nassau. She had on board a clearance at Nassau for Beaufort. The master of the vessel testified that he had bought the vessel, he being a resident of North Carolina, and that the real voyage was from Nassau to any port of North Carolina he could get into.

Vessel condemned and forfeited.

The United States vs. The Sloop Maccoon.—This vessel was captured by the Quaker City on Jan. 4, 1863, going out of Charleston harbor with a cargo of spirits of turpentine. The cargo was sent to this port and libeled as prize; the vessel being dispatched at $200 and taken for the Government service. The owner of the vessel, her mate and one passenger, were brought here and examined as witnesses. The owner resided in Charleston, and denied all allegiance to the Government of the United States. He had attempted to come out of Charleston once before unsuccessfully. His voyage was for Nassau and back. She was carrying a mail to Nassau, which westbound overboard. No papers were found on the vessel. No defence was interposed in the suit.

Vessel and cargo condemned and forfeited.

The United States vs. The Sloop Wave and Cargo.—This vessel was captured June 27, 1862, in Mississippi Sound, by the brig Bahia. The vessel not being seaworthy, her cargo was brought here in other vessels. On July 30 the District Attorney, on application to the Court, obtained an order for the examination of a person present at the capture, but not belonging to the Wave. He testified that the capture was made as alleged, and that the vessel was appropriated to the use of the United States, and that the captures were made because the vessel and cargo were Confederate property, and were bound from Mobile to Pascagoula, both blockaded ports. Only four persons were on board the sloop. They were of a low class, and were not brought to this port. No papers were found on board of her.

Process in this cause was returned on Sept. 29 by the Marshal. His return was, that he had attached the vessel and cargo. No one appeared to defend the suit.

Held by the Court—That on the proofs the Marshal's return was correct only as to the cargo. That was present and within the reach of process, but it could only be served symbolically on the vessel, and there is no evidence of an appearance in her behalf.

That there is no legal proof furnished for omitting to bring to this port the persons apprehended with the vessel, nor is that degree of proof given adequate to show that she was enemy property or had violated the blockade.

That as to the cargo which was in actual custody, the monition issued on such seizure, and legally served and not replied to, furnishes prima facie evidence of the truth of the allegations made against it.

That the libelants, therefore, are entitled to a decree of condemnation and forfeiture against the cargo.

That the sloop is acquitted in the suit, for want of legal arrest and prosecution as to her.

United States District Court—March 3.

Before Judge Betts.

NOTICE TO THE BAR.

The March term of this Court opened this morning. After the return of process, Judge Betts announced to the Bar that the calendar would be called to-morrow, peremptorily, but cases being put upon the calendar for the day; just if they prior cases were prepared for hearing during the term, they would go on the calendar and be called in their order; that no engagement of counsel elsewhere would be taken as an excuse; that the members of the Bar would have an opportunity to try every case on the calendar, but when the case was called, the Court would take no excuse, except sickness or some other overwhelming reason, for the case going off.

Liability of Indorsers as Surety.

SUPREME COURT—CIRCUIT.

Before Justice Leonard.

Francis P. Leary vs. Thomas Cassidy et al.—This was an action on a promissory note by one McGill, indorsed by Cassidy, and after him the indorsement of the payee. The note was subsequently passed away with the two certain dodgers to serve on it. The payee took up the note after maturity, and passed it to the plaintiff; but the signature of Cassidy "was erased at the time of payment."

The Court held that, although Cassidy indorsed as "surety," he was entitled to all the rights of indorser in regard to demand protest, and that the erasure of Cassidy's name, in the absence of testimony explaining the same, was presumptive evidence that his liability had ceased.

On motion, the complaint was dismissed.

Champion Bissell for plaintiff; R. D. Hatch and C. D. Newman for defendant.

The Fort Gansevoort Property Contest—A Story of Proceedings Granted Pending Appeal.

SUPREME COURT—CHAMBERS.

Before Justice Barnard.

The People, &c., ex rel. James B. Taylor et al., vs. Matthew T. Brennan, Comptroller.—In this proceeding, the Comptroller made his return to the writ of peremptory mandamus, and on application of the Counsel to the Corporation a stay of proceedings without security was granted, pending the appeal to the General Term, taken by the Comptroller—the appeal to be heard at the May term.

An Action against the Sheriff—Verdict for Plaintiff.

SUPERIOR COURT—TRIAL TERM.

Before Justice Monell.

William Garrison vs. John Kelly, Sheriff, &c.—This was an action brought by the plaintiff against the late Sheriff for the alleged wrongful detention of a roan horse, of the value of $250, of which the plaintiff claims to be the owner, and which the Sheriff seized on an execution in an action brought in the Superior Court, by one James Brien against James Garrison and Andrew C. Garrison. Judgment was obtained in that action on or about the 12th day of May, 1862, in favor of said James Brien for the sum of $342, and execution was issued against the said James and Andrew C. Garrison, which was delivered to the defendant in this suit, and the sum of $342, with interest, being due upon said judgment, the defendant, to satisfy the judgment, seized upon the personal property of the judgment debtors.

The jury gave a verdict for the plaintiff for $200, the value of the horse.

R. Harrington for plaintiff; A. J. Vandepoel for defendant.

An Action to Recover for Personal Injuries, and the Result.

SUPERIOR COURT—TRIAL TERM.

Henry Weber, Sr., Guardian of Henry Weber, Jr., infant, vs. Joseph Bauer and James (Sener.)—The plaintiff sued, in behalf of his ward, to recover for injuries alleged to have been suffered by the child in consequence of his having been caught into the wheel of a steam coffee grinding machine, while in the store of the defendants, No. 49 Vesey-street, in this City, on or about the 23d of February, 1862.

The plaintiff alleged that notwithstanding the fact that the defendants had an auction at their place on the day in question, they still left this machine in motion, and in such an exposed or careless manner that the child, in attempting to pass it, did so injured that the action was commenced.

The answer was a general denial of all the allegations of the complaint, and that the defendants were partners, in business, at No. 49 Vesey-street. When the action came on for trial in April last, in consent of plaintiff's counsel, the Court held that as an infant it was present for the benefit of the guardian, and as the age limit of the infant plaintiff was, therefore, allowed to withdraw a juror and the motion to be over until the title could be transferred to "Henry Weber, Sr., the late Guardian Henry Weber, Sr."

The motion for leave to amend was opposed by the defendant' counsel, upon his affidavit setting forth that the plaintiff elected on the trial to go on as if the action was for his own benefit, and called his wife to testify; whereupon defendants' counsel objected to her testimony in the case, she being the wife of the plaintiff, and the Court sustained the objection; and that thereupon the plaintiff's counsel claimed leave and was allowed to withdraw a juror.

The Court, at Special Term, permitted the plaintiff to amend as proposed, and the defendants appealed from the order to the General Term, where the order was affirmed.

The cause stands upon the calendar for trial again, and the complaint was discharged.

D. E. Taylor for plaintiff; Adriance & Vanderpoel for defendants.

Alleged Wrongful Seizure and Detention.

COMMON PLEAS—TRIAL TERM.

Before Justice Rudy.

John C. Johnson vs. John Rudderow et als.—This case was stated in Tuesday's Times. The plaintiff brought his action to recover of defendants for the wrongful taking a stock of cloths, &c. from plaintiff's store, No. 288 Bowery, in June, 1861.

The defendants claimed that the property was taken by the Sheriff in the discharge of his official duty under an attachment against Archibald Johnson, to whom, they alleged, the property belonged. The verdict is now given for plaintiff for $600, with interest from the date of the seizure.

John E. Rankert for plaintiff; Scudder & Carter for defendants.

Will of E. P. Christy—Motion for Counsel Fee to Contestants Denied.

SURROGATE'S COURT.

Before Surrogate Tucker.

In the Matter of E. P. Christy's Estate.—In this case a motion was made by contestants for a counsel fee, on the ground that the account is likely to be a protracted one, and the contestants have no means of their own by which to prosecute the matter, and that it will be hardship not to make an allowance.

The motion was opposed by the executors on the ground that the Surrogate has no power to make such an allowance.

The Surrogate decided that although the present might be a case of hardship, still there was no remedy, as he had clearly no power to allow counsel fees out of the estate. If parties consented, he would make a reasonable allowance, but not otherwise.

The motion was denied, without costs to either party.

Samuel Jones and C. K. Smith for motion; A. W. Bradford and F. G. Clark opposed.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

The Government, our Washington correspondent says, is still without any authentic information from either Vicksburgh, Charleston or Savannah. There is probably, therefore, no truth in the reports which have been put in circulation, of important operations at these points. In the face of this, however, the Washington Star states positively that Maj.-Gen. Dix telegraphed the President on Tuesday evening, stating that rebel papers had been received at Fortress Monroe, containing the important intelligence that Fort McAllister had fallen into the hands of the Union forces. The Washington Republican is equally positive in its assertion that such a telegram was received by the President.

In connection with the reports of the withdrawal of the rebels from Vicksburgh, the following from a Murfreesboro letter (Feb. 28) is of interest: "News received here indicates that Vicksburgh is to be evacuated by the rebels. Everything except the supplies for the army is removing. The army has been removed east of Black River. Sickness in their army is terrible, and the desertions are great."

According to the rebel official reports, said to have been received in Washington, the gunboat Indianola was so badly damaged in the action with the rebel rams that she was rendered useless to her captors. She is represented to be now sunk in the Mississippi, some distance below Vicksburgh.

Gen. HOOKER has issued an important order, designating certain regiments and batteries which do not come up to the requisite standard of discipline, and also those which have excelled in soldierly conduct. The former he shuts out from all furloughs until their condition shall have been improved—the latter he rewards, by increasing the number of furloughs, both to officers and men.

Nothing of special importance was done by the United States Senate yesterday. A number of new members took the oath and their seats. It was resolved to return all nominations of military officers, etc., not confirmed by the late Senate, to the President. After the adjournment the President's Private Secretary reached the Capitol with several Executive communications, which will probably be acted upon to-day.

THE STATE LEGISLATURE.

In the Senate yesterday, the bill to authorize the making of sidewalks and the planting of shade-trees along the highways of the State, was reported favorably; also, the bill authorizing the Courts of Oyer and Terminer and General Sessions to grant new trials; also, the bills legalizing acts of the Corporation of New-York relating to volunteers. The latter were immediately passed. A majority report was made in favor of allowing dummy engines on the Brooklyn Central Railroad. Notice was given that a minority report would be presented. Among the bills introduced was one to extend the time for the collection of taxes to the 1st of June, 1863.

In the Assembly, several explanations were made respecting the charges against Speaker CAMPBELL. The Annual Appropriation bill was debated throughout the morning session.

GENERAL NEWS.

The Inman screw-steamer City of New-York, Capt. PETERS, which sailed from Liverpool at 11 o'clock on the morning of the 18th, and from Queenstown on the afternoon of Feb. 19, arrived here yesterday morning. She brings the United States mails and 449 bales of cotton. Her advices have been mostly anticipated.

The Chamber of Commerce, yesterday, instructed a Committee to report what steps are necessary to be taken in view of the burning of the ship Jacob Bell. Addresses were made by Messrs. A. A. LOW, F. M. WEYMORE, JONATHAN STURGIS, S. B. CHITTENDEN, PELATIAH PERIT, and other merchants, who complained bitterly of the course of Great Britain in the matter.

The Municipal Harbor Defence Commission met yesterday, and adopted a series of rules for their government, and also resolved to invite Admiral PAULDING, ALFRED W. CRAVEN, Esq., Capt. ERICSSON, and other gentlemen of ability and experience, to lay before them their views as to the best means of defending the harbor. The Commission adjourned to 6 P. M. of Monday next.

The Board of Councilmen met at 4 o'clock P. M. yesterday. A message was received from the Mayor, and referred to the Finance Committee, suggesting that provision be made, in the City Appropriation for 1863, to purchase for the Corporation the right of the patent telegraph apparatus now in use here, instead of paying for the right of each instrument that is brought into service—the latter being, in the opinion of the Mayor, too expensive a proceeding. The Comptroller sent in, in answer to a resolution of inquiry, a statement of the sums paid for City and County advertising during 1862. It appears that $72,017 03 was paid out on City account to forty-two newspapers, and thirty-eight newspapers received $17,408 71 on County account. The Express heads the list, having received $19,085 29 for City advertising alone, being $8,000 more than was received by any other paper, the Transcript getting a little over $11,000. The World got $9,000 on City account. The figures for other papers do not range above $6,500. The Board made the City Appropriation bill the special order for 3 P. M. on next Saturday, and adjourned to that time.

The Second Annual Commencement of Bellevue Hospital Medical College took place last evening, at Irving Hall, in the presence of a crowded audience. SIMEON DRAPER, Esq., presided. Forty-two graduates received the degree of M. D., and addresses were delivered by Prof. FRANK H. HAMILTON, on behalf of the Faculty; by Mr. DRAPER, on behalf of the Trustees; by T. L. CALLANAN, on behalf of the graduates, and by Most Rev. Archbishop HUGHES.

The Annual Commencement of the Medical Department of the New-York University was held last evening, when fifty-six graduates, representing about one-half of the States of the Union, received the degree of M. D. An interesting and instructive address was delivered to the graduates by Prof. METCALF.

The Monitor Lehigh, at Chester, Penn., it is expected will be ready for service by the first of next month. Nearly all the machinery is in place, her turret is up, and the guns will be mounted in a few days. This vessel, like the one sent from Chester a short time since, is constructed in the most substantial manner, and, in the estimation of many, is fit for sea service.

There was another fall of few per cent. in Gold Coin yesterday, attended by great excitement in Wall- and William streets. The Stock market ruled steady and rather firm at the close.

The extraordinary fall and unprecedented excitement in the Gold market, yesterday, seriously impeded operations in domestic Produce and General Merchandise. A very limited business was transacted at the Produce Exchange. Flour was quoted down 15c.@25c. per bbl.; Wheat, nominally, 5c.@8c., and Corn 2c.@3c. per bushel. Provisions and Whisky were also generally cheaper. The movements in Groceries, Oils, Hay, Hops and Tobacco, were quite moderate. Cotton declined about 2c. per pound, and closed heavily. The freight engagements were unimportant.

The Copperheads and Foreign Intervention.

The Copperheads, small in number, in both branches of Congress, refused to vote for the resolutions against foreign interference. They all went either plumply against them, or dodged. This thing should be noted. It is another illustration of the lack of national feeling which marks all this creeping, cold-blooded breed.

Nobody pretends that the resolutions contained either sentiment or language calculated needlessly to offend foreign sensibilities. Though earnest and decided, they were still temperate and courteous. They ascribed the offers to mediate to a misunderstanding, impugning no motives; they set forth the inherent impossibility of submitting the national authority to arbitration; they expressed an unqualified determination to maintain that authority inviolate; they declared that the only practical effect of any foreign proposition, however designed, was to encourage and stay up the rebellion; and they publicly announced that "Congress will be obliged to look upon any further attempts in the same direction as an unfriendly act." Certainly the dignity and the interests of the Republic required nothing less than this plain statement. It is precisely because the Copperheads care nothing for the dignity or the interests of the Republic that they refused to sustain it.

Mr. POWELL and Mr. SAULSBURY, the leaders of this faction in the Senate, both freely avowed that they would hail with joy any foreign mediation calculated to produce peace. They would not only permit foreign potentates to step in and regulate our domestic affairs, but would thank them for it. It is almost incredible that the same Chamber which, in other times, rang with such indignation if a European Power did but presume to put its foot on one square yard of sand or bog between Cape Horn and the Great Lakes, should now give out these piteous whinings that some good nation would be kind enough to come over and make disposition of our very altars and firesides. It would absolutely stagger belief were it not that the factious spirit, whence this emanates, had already showed itself capable of any extent of vileness. He who has once made up his mind to accept this rebellion as his master, is prepared to crouch before anything. There is not a power on the earth, nor in the regions under the earth, before which he does not feel like crawling. His soul becomes essentially servile. Manhood quits him. BURKE said that "there was something about the accursed French Revolution which poisoned everything." It is so with this revolution. It changes every nature which comes in contact with it—if not infuriating it into a demon, debasing it into a reptile.

But it is supposed that even creeping things have their subtlety. Where is it here? What Copperhead can for a moment presume that the American people are going to come down to his level? How can it be conceived that a whole people should, in a few short months, so degenerate? Individuals may sink quickly; but great States never. It takes generations to abase the once high spirit of a nation. Independence of foreign control and influence has always been the dominant feeling of this Republic. It was infused by the very authors of its being, and has always grown with its growth and strengthened with its strength. It has operated probably more than any other single element to shape the speech and thought and action of the nation. It had come to be recognized the world over as the peculiar test of American blood. Nothing could be more absurd than to imagine that such a national quality would pass away in the day of the nation's adversity. The old Castilian pride has survived centuries of misfortune, and nothing was more certain than that the American spirit of independence would hold good through at least one sad year or two.

We tell these abject creatures that there can be no foreign interference, however much they may invite it. The resolutions, which have commanded every loyal vote in Congress, embody the spirit of the nation. Come what may, they will be maintained. Europe, if she doubts, will be made to understand that this Republic is not dead yet; that it lives, and means to live; and that it will fight to the death, sooner than submit to foreign dictation, or abate one jot or tittle of its absolute self-control. There has been no time from the beginning of this rebellion in which foreign interference could be undertaken without war; nor will there be any such time to the end. Sooner than peaceably submit to it, true Americans would see every wave that laves their shores reddened with blood. They will not give up their birthright, even though they have to fight the world in arms. The country that once consents to put its destinies at the disposition of foreign monarchs, is no longer fit to have any destiny but a dishonorable grave. The Nemesis of human affairs, in fact, always reserves that fate for a people so derelict. For a time, perhaps, nations self-abandoned to dependence, like Turkey, may maintain a feeble distracted existence; but they are sure, sooner or later, to die a shameful wretched death. It will be infinitely better for this Republic to go down with its gorgeous ensign in "one red burial blent," than that it should have a name to live under that dog-fashioned, and repinesed as mongrels might bid. Republican freedom would, in the one case, sometime rise with new strength and glory; in the other, it would sink into irrecoverable impotence and contempt.

But it is idle to talk of this. Ardently as these miserable minions of the rebellion may desire a foreign combination against the integrity of the Republic, it will not come; or, if it does come, it will come in vain. The national supremacy will prevail against all foes, without or within. We have no more doubt of it than that the Continent itself will stand, however, the waters rage.

From One Extreme to Another.

Our neighbor, the Herald, whose financial and editorial columns labored, a few days since, to prove that the Government has created a paper expansion of thirteen hundred and odd millions, suddenly discovered yesterday, on the fall of five per cent. in Gold, that "the day of specie payments is not far distant." This transition is so sudden and extreme, that we shall not be surprised to read in the same journal this morning that on the further break down of ten per cent. in gold, the day for specie payments has actually arrived.

This sort of argument, if seriously designed as such, is baldly fallacious on both extremes. It is worse. It is mischievous in the highest degree to the substantial credit of the Government, and in its tendency embarrassing to the operations of the Treasury. The semi-secession gold speculators in this market, resident here and at Washington, recently labored, with scarcely an effort to conceal their real purpose, to put up the premium to one hundred per cent., that is, one dollar in gold for two in United States Notes; and at this point the credit of the Government was to break down with our own people, and the financial misfortune to the Government, to reach the crisis of the repudiation of all Treasury paper in trade and in payment for the supplies of the army and navy. That there was force in this calculation, and that there would have been imminent danger of serious if not for the moment fatal, embarrassment in the operations of the Government in case that so high a premium on Gold had been made, we shall not now stop to question. That it would have added enormously to the cost of the war there is no rational ground to doubt. The enemies of the Government, whether as participants or lookers on, thoroughly understood the real tendency of the speculation and certainly intensified accordingly. They were gratified to the measure of 17¼ per cent. before the Loan bill of Congress was consummated; chiefly, however, through their own enormous speculative purchases for cash and on time, and the ready facilities for carrying that gold, afforded by certain brokers of easy loyalty, and certain banks and bankers of no genuine sense of loyalty whatever, in William and Wall streets. And no sooner had the Loan bill been agreed upon, in conference between the two Houses, and to the entire satisfaction and conservative views of the Secretary of the Treasury, than the parties referred to are encouraged by the perverted and most extravagant story of the thirteen hundred millions expansion. This, however, was not sufficient to keep up the price, and soon we had the additional help of the oft-repeated rumors of disaster at Vicksburgh, the Washington secession gamblers in gold adding millions to their purchases on the strength of their own scandalous inventions. The ultimate result is now before the public. The thirteen hundred millions are exploded. The Vicksburgh disaster has not yet turned up. Gold has gone down 15 per cent. and the end of the reaction is not yet.

But the Government and the banks are quite as far from the day of specie payments as though these purely gambling operations against the credit of both had not had their ups and downs—130 to 174 per cent. No rational man, with the slightest degree of candor, looks for such a day before the close of the war. No loyal man truly desires it, if there is the slightest hazard that any attempt to bring about resumption would endanger the success of the war, or the ability of the Government to raise money for its vigorous and successful prosecution. That nothing of the kind is now contemplated at the Treasury or in banking circles, is as certain as the impracticability of accomplishing it. The mischief of broaching or seriously agitating such a step is not one whit less than the converse of the proposition that the Loan bill is to produce an immeasurable inflation of paper money, and to render an early return to specie payments after the war an impossibility. The labor of every true man on this subject should be to reduce the premium on gold to the rational point it was made to depart from by a wicked, demoralizing, and, in good part, traitorous speculation some months ago. It will be time enough to talk of specie payments after the war. Meanwhile, the country may rest assured that under the new Loan act Mr. CHASE will do nothing to render such an event easy and practicable until after the restoration of the National authority through the length and breadth of a common Union.

MEXICAN AFFAIRS.—We publish this morning, in advance of the documents recently submitted to Congress upon the subject of Mexican affairs, the able circular of the present accomplished Minister of Foreign Relations of that Republic, Mr. FERRERA, addressed to the Governors of the different Mexican States, and setting forth the programme of the Cabinet of President JUAREZ in the present crisis of their heroic resistance to the French.

It will be seen that the Congress of Mexico, which recently closed its sessions, has conferred upon their Executive almost precisely the same unlimited and dictatorial powers which our Congress has conferred upon President LINCOLN; and that the country is unanimous in sustaining the Administration in the exercise of these powers. Fortunately, President JUAREZ has fully demonstrated, not only that he is entirely without personal ambition, but that any powers, however ample, may be safely intrusted to his hands, and that under any and all circumstances, his only desire is to preserve intact the republican institutions which the people of Mexico have so repeatedly manifested their unconquerable determination to maintain, and to secure the accomplishment of those reforms—among which the principal is the entire separation of Church and State—which they have shed so much blood to maintain.

In the face of the resistance of a people raised as the people of Mexico have been by the great moral struggle through which, for the accomplishment of these reforms, they have been passing, it will be a fruitless task for NAPOLEON III., with all his power, to continue his attempts to conquer Mexico, or to overthrow her republican institutions.

There is a force in principles, and there is a power in a righteous cause, which must secure to Mexico triumph in the end; and we cannot but compare most favorably the elevated tone and the respect for right manifested in the circular of Mr. FERRERA, with the disregard of international law presented in the Forey letter, which, henceforth, must be taken as the basis of NAPOLEON's policy in his conduct toward Mexico.

The Meeting To-Night.

We trust that the Union meeting in this City to-night will, in its magnitude and in its spirit, be worthy to take rank with the recent magnificent popular demonstrations in Cincinnati, Indianapolis, and other cities of the Northwest. That section of our common country, which some had accused of being weary of battling for the Union, and ready to strike hands with the traitors, has just shown anew that she still stands undaunted, defiant, determined, full of vitality and enthusiasm as at first, but with that enthusiasm grown twice sacred, and stern as death. The battle-scarred soldiers there have spoken, regiment by regiment, and they have spoken as they have always fought; the chief Generals have spoken, and their words "were half battles." States and cities have spoken, and the voices from the peaceful fields have re-echoed the loyal shouts from the field of war. The Copperheads have crept to their holes in dismay, and their hissing is now scarce heard.

It is now the turn of the Eastern States, and New-York, as is meet, takes the lead. The Empire City of the Continent, New-York has everything to gain or lose by the restoration or disruption of this imperial Union. From the beginning her voice has been for the war, for the Government and the Union. She has spoken through her authorities, through her munificent contributions of money, through her fifty regiments. But here, too, the Copperheads are opening their jaws and hissing their feeble hiss at the army, at the Government, and virtually at the Union. They must be driven to their dens.

The meeting to-night will express the sentiment, and give voice to the feeling, of the City. Over such an assemblage, convened for such a purpose, it is fit that the grand old soldier, WINFIELD SCOTT, should preside. Though war-worn and feeble, his heart is still strong, his spirit bold as when, half a century ago, it flamed forth at Landy's Lane, and he still hopes to live to see the old flag of his love floating in glory from the Aroostook to the Rio Grande. It is meet that men of such different politics as JOHN VAN BUREN, Judge HOLT, Mr. BANCROFT, Ben. BUTLER and WINTER DAVIS, should be present as speakers—for the Union in this crisis knows no political distinctions. The resolutions, to be found elsewhere, are strong and good. And all that is needed is the presence of the loyal masses of the Metropolis to make the meeting worthy of her fame and character.

Trade as a Union Agency.

An effort was made in the closing hours of Congress to obtain authority for the Secretary of the Treasury to seize, through his agents, cotton and such other products of the seceded States as might fall within the lines of our advancing armies. The property thus seized was to be held in the name of the Government and sold for its benefit. Hereafter, if the owners of this property should establish their character for loyalty to the United States, the value thereof was to be paid to them.

The intention of this law was to root out the pernicious practice of private speculation in cotton through the aid and with the participation of army officers, which has brought such disgrace upon the military service—particularly in the Southwest. In so far as it had this object, it was a wise and necessary measure. The scandal of cotton speculations in Mississippi and Arkansas, by and through military officers who have not scrupled to use their soldiers and the transportation of the Government to carry out their schemes, is admitted and notorious. The Commission, to meet shortly at St. Louis, to investigate the charges made in this matter, will find enough to prove them in the main, but it will hardly succeed in bringing to light the most discreditable and infamous features of these transactions. The fact that open enemies of the Government have been dealt with, and their cotton paid for by the agents or favorites of military commanders—that these avowed traitors have been paid for their cotton in gold, or in goods contraband of war, smuggled through the Union lines, are facts just as indisputable as the purchase of the cotton itself. But no one except the parties receiving the pay can testify to these facts. And the rebels will not be forthcoming as witnesses. It is a fact that can be proved, and in time will be, that men professing to have, and in reality having, the written permission of the commanders of Western military districts, to go into certain counties to trade, have, after getting into those counties, gone straight to the camps of rebels in arms, and made agreement with them in return for certain favors, to bring in powder and shot, swords, pistols and carbines for their use.

These dangerous irregularities will continue, now that the measure before Congress for its reform has failed, unless the Secretary of War shall, by arrangement with the Treasury Department, put this whole matter upon a totally different footing. The officers of the army, its purveyors and the camp-followers, should be forbidden to take part at all in the general trade of the districts they pass through or occupy. They should be allowed to buy food and forage for the army—nothing more. The business of trade is a civil, not a military function; and the less the army has to do with it, the more time it will have to devote to its exclusive business of fighting.

The Treasury Department should be allowed to regulate trade, and legitimate trade should be encouraged to its fullest extent in every seceded district that can be reached. Nothing so saps the foundation of a Secessionist's devotion to Southern Rights as the opportunity to sell his cotton crop to a Yankee for 50 cents a pound, and get his pay in "greenbacks," or in shoes, dry goods and general groceries for himself and family. Nothing so excites the wrath of the rebel Government as to have this trade between Northern men and their late liege subjects go on; and hence their barbarous acts, first burning the cotton, and now threatening death to those planters who voluntarily sell it to the North.

It is not an insignificant sum of United States currency that Southern districts will absorb if they are allowed a free and honest trade with Northern cities. Mr. CHASE may safely count on a large absorption of his money in seceded States under proper encouragement of trade. It is a fact that he may not be aware of, that already in numerous counties in the States of Tennessee, Arkansas and Mississippi, there is more of United States currency held than of all other forms of money put together; and the prevailing pecuniary interest of the people in those counties is in the success of the United States Government and the ultimate solvency of its treasury.

The proposition that was before Congress to seize, in behalf of the Treasury, all cotton and other Southern products as fast as reached, was not well considered. It would have stripped men of their means of living and made them hostile to the Government. They would have destroyed their cotton rather than lose it thus. But let them sell it and they will defy the edicts of the rebellion, risk loyalty and life itself by trading with the Yankees, and in the end get money which is dependent on the restoration of the Union for its value. Besides, the seizure of their property by Government agents, if they did not rather destroy it, would bring no return, even of innocent and desirable commerce with the people. Having nothing to sell, they would have nothing to buy with, and would remain aliens in feeling and fortune from the Union that continued to ravage and destroy them.

A clear and safe catalogue of goods and wares, suitable for all agricultural districts in the United States within Union lines, should be made, and persons of known loyalty and integrity should be allowed freely to enter the reclaimed districts of the seceded States and sell the same. And no man who could not establish a claim to such character, beyond all question, to the Treasury Department, should be allowed to enter those districts with a dollar's worth of goods. Integrity must be the basis of this commerce. If submitted to the chance of general rules, forgery and false swearing will break through them, and the trade conducted will be as it is now, under the military régime, an impudent and corrupt nursery of treason.

Gold—Up or Down.

The remarkable occurrences of the past two days in Wall-street, involving the decline of nearly twenty per cent. in the nominal value of gold, are of prodigious interest to the country. The effect of the decline on the habitués of Wall and William streets is of comparatively little moment. It will be disastrous to those who have sold to deliver gold that they never had; but it will be equally a godsend to those who have bought gold that they never had means to pay for. The settling of the differences will make one side poorer, but the other side by exactly an equal amount richer. There the matter ends. The country at large is neither richer nor poorer on account of the losses and gains by speculation at the Stock Board.

But the business of the nation at large is profoundly interested in the question whether gold is to command a high or a low premium as a permanency in regular, legitimate transactions. If the rapid advance in the price of gold, which, in less than one year, has been carried up to over seventy per cent. premium, is fictitious, and the result merely of speculation, the effect has not been the less disastrous to the commerce and labor of the nation. Foreign exchange, which is a reality, has kept pace with the fictitious price of gold, and everything bought abroad under the stress of the times, has been taxed to reach the supposed standard of gold. And the consumers, including the millions of the laboring masses, have in the end footed the bill in the increased cost of everything they have had to buy. It is something to this part of our population—aptly styled by a Jacksonian Vice-President "the toiling millions"—whether gold shall rule high or rule low in the exchange market of the United States.

A few days will serve to settle the question whether the rapid decline of the past few days is the result of real or fictitious causes. If the decline is natural and is to be permanent, the relief it will bring to the country, in the moderation of the cost of living, is almost incalculable. It will only be expressed in millions of dollars.

Under the present laws of the United States, there can be but few imperative demands for gold. It will be required for export in payment of debts, or to make new purchases. It will be required to pay duties on imports. And, thirdly, it will, by many parties, be eagerly sought for hoarding. With regard to the first of these demands, it is to be remarked that it is gradated by the ability of the country to ship its own productions—such as wheat, cotton and tobacco—abroad for sale. All such exports decrease by so much the necessity for shipping gold. It is the balance of trade only, if against us, that must be made up in gold.

With regard to the second mentioned demand for gold—to pay duties on imports—it is to be observed that such receipts by the Government are immediately returned to the people in payment of interest on the Government debt, and is in no sense an abstraction from the nation's reserve. It would appear, then, that under the present laws of the country, there is absolutely no legitimate demand for gold, save to pay to foreign nations the balance of trade against us—an annually decreasing and now really insignificant sum—and no other demand of any kind, save that of timid persons for hoarding. The production of the precious metal in the country should be amply sufficient to meet these demands; and no reason remains for any premium at all on gold in the general market. If the laws passed are effective to remove speculation utterly from the field, it can hardly fail that gold will permanently decline, and that the valuations of property will return very near to their normal standard before the exaggerated advance in gold occurred.

THE ANGLO-CONFEDERATE PRIVATEERS.—There was some very strong talk at the Chamber of Commerce meeting, yesterday, concerning the British pirates who are now using the rebel flag to destroy American commerce on the waters of our own coast, as well as on every sea of the globe. The recent accounts we have published from London journals make it appear that the matter is likely soon to assume a far more formidable and dagitious character than it has at present. It would be impossible for the commercial marine of any nation to exist for three months in the face of the warlike naval force that is now being fitted up in English ports for the "Emperor of China," alias JEFF. DAVIS. The cotton bonds, and mortgages upon the Southern cotton crop, are the means used to pay for these ships, while the prospect of plunder and the love of lawless adventure will always be a sufficient inducement for British sailors to man them. We must primarily look for redress in this business, and for its prevention, to our own skill and resources; but our Government must not fail to persistently press upon the British authorities some regard for that neutrality of which they perfidiously boast. The British Government can no longer pretend that it does not officially know the facts; for our Minister to their Court has taken care that this pretence shall be no longer tenable. Mr. TAYLOR, member of Parliament from Leicester, truly said that if the Mexicans were to go to England to purchase vessels to prey upon French commerce, nobody doubted that the British Government would detect the fact, and very quickly put a stop to the negotiations or to the career of any such vessel that might attempt to get to sea. And they would be as careful in their dealings with us if they had the same wholesome respect of our power.

At the meeting yesterday afternoon, Mr. Low, the owner of the ship Jacob Bell, burned the other day by the Florida, magnanimously said he had faith in Great Britain, when the Government of that country should come to consider in its true light the injury and wrong that were being perpetrated upon our country. We trust it will be justified. At all events, we must demand and insist upon justice, and prepare to enforce it, so far as we are concerned, the world over.

The Tax Law Amendments.

We present, in another portion of this morning's issue, a conveniently arranged table of the amended rates of internal duty. The law passed last Summer has been found defective in some particulars, and the rates of duty imposed by it disadvantageous to the Government. The Act took effect on the first of last September and the six months of its operation which have since passed have served to suggest the modifications embodied in the amendatory act. A glance at the table will show the reader that the changes in the rates of taxation are quite numerous and important. In addition to the alterations there noted, some have been made in sections relating to the duties of the Government officers and of the persons taxed. One of the most important of the new provisions imposes a severe penalty on those who do not pay the license tax required of them by law. The section referred to reads as follows:

"And be it further enacted, That if any person or persons shall exercise or carry on any trade or business, for the exercising or carrying on of which trade or business a license is required, without taking out such license as is in that behalf required, he, she or they shall, for every such offense, upon conviction thereof, in lieu of or in addition to other penalties now imposed by law, at the discretion of the Court, be subject to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years."

The compensation of the officers appointed under the tax law has been increased as follows:

"Collectors, in addition to the compensation now allowed them for their service and that of their deputies, are to be allowed a further commission of one-tenth of one per cent. upon all sums collected over the sum of $400,000 in any one year, and their necessary and reasonable charges for postage actually paid, the compensation exclusive of official expenses, not to exceed $5,000, however."

The Assessors are to receive, in lieu of the sum named in the original act, a salary of $1,500 per annum from the date of their appointments, and in addition thereto, where the receipts of the collection district shall exceed the sum of $200,000 annually, one per centum upon the excess of receipts over that amount, the total amount not to exceed $2,500. In addition to this compensation, allowance for clerk-hire and office-rent is made, as well as all reasonable charges for postage, &c.

Assistant-Assessors are to receive in addition to the pay already allowed them, only the sums expended for postage.

Several new offices are created by the law just enacted. They are as follows: That of Deputy Commissioner of Internal Revenue—the incumbent to be appointed by the President, with an annual salary of $3,000. That of Cashier of Internal Duties, whose salary is to be $1,500, and who is required to give bonds that he will account for all moneys intrusted to him.

The Bureau in charge of exports for the benefit of drawback, under the laws relating to duties on imports, is also to have charge of the exports for the benefit of drawback under the Internal Revenue act, and its chief is to rank and receive pay as a Deputy Collector of Customs.

One other change of importance we note here. No duty is to be required on beer, lager-beer, ale or porter, brewed or manufactured, or on coal, illuminating oil, refined, produced by distillation of coal, asphaltum, shale, peat, petroleum, or rock oil, when brewed, manufactured or distilled prior to Sept. 1, 1862. In case a duty has already been levied on the articles above enumerated, manufactured prior to Sept. 1, 1862, the amount paid is to be refunded, on production of proof that the manufacture was prior to that date, and that the duties have been paid.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

The Extraordinary Session of the Senate.

THE STANDING COMMITTEES.

No News Received by the Government from Vicksburg, Charleston or Savannah.

OUR SPECIAL WASHINGTON DISPATCHES.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, March 5.

THE SENATE STANDING COMMITTEES.

The Republican Senators held a caucus this morning, for the purpose of arranging the Standing Committees. Senator ARNOLD was authorized to submit a resolution to the Senate, empowering the Vice-President to announce the Committees. When the resolution was offered, Senator FESSENDEN, who, it appears, did not like that mode of arranging the Committees, moved that the Vice-President be only empowered to fill vacancies. This action on the part of Senator FESSENDEN was considered by several of the Senators as factious, as it appeared he had concurred in the caucus resolution.

NOMINATIONS.

The President sent a large number of nominations to the Senate, to-day, but they did not reach that body until it had adjourned. They were consequently returned to the President by Mr. NICOLAY, his private Secretary, who brought them.

VICKSBURGH AND CHARLESTON.

The Government are still without any authentic information from either Vicksburgh, Charleston or Savannah.

THE SUPREME COURT.

The Supreme Court of the United States decided, to-day, not to render any opinions in the several cases until Tuesday next. They will then render decisions in all cases, including the Almaden and prize cases.

THE NEW-HAMPSHIRE CAMPAIGN.

Congressional talent continues in demand in New-Hampshire. Messrs. BINGHAM, of Ohio, and KELLEY, of Philadelphia, who went yesterday, are followed to-day by Senators RICHARDSON and CLARK. Others are expected to follow in a day or two.

THE ADDITIONAL OATH.

GARRETT DAVIS announced to-day that he should oppose any attempt at enforcing the additional oath of office, intended to reach the case of the disloyal and secession sympathizers, and there is some probability of a vexatious debate on the subject.

SENATOR HALE.

Senator HALE resumed his seat in the Senate to-day looking still somewhat enfeebled from the effects of his late illness.

INTERNAL TAX COMMISSIONER.

The President has appointed Hon. JOSEPH J. LEWIS, of Pennsylvania, successor to Gov. ROGERS, as Commissioner under the Internal Revenue law. He is said to have enjoyed large financial as well as legal experience.

A SERENADE TO MR. OLIN.

Ex-Representative OLIN, late Chairman of the House Military Committee, was serenaded to-night at Willard's, by a delegation from the One Hundred and Sixty-ninth New-York Regiment, which was raised in Troy, where he resides. He responded briefly and felicitously, and was followed by Cols. DIXON, of New-York, and BROWN, of Rhode Island, and by Gen. JAMES NYE, Governor of Nevada. The latter in the course of his remarks, alluded to Gen. HOOKER as having come from his locality in the far West, and pledged him as a man terribly in earnest, who would get his nose out of joint on no small point of military etiquette, but would fight steadily right on till the last rebel flag should be lowered, and the supremacy of the national authority everywhere vindicated. His remarks were received with loud applause.

THE NEW JUDGESHIPS.

There are already about eighty applicants for the four Judgeships created by the act reorganizing the Courts of the District. The powers of the Courts ceased to-day. The President will doubtless make the appointments in a few days.

DEATHS OF SOLDIERS.

The following are the latest reported deaths of New-York soldiers: Allen P. Hubbell, 118th New-York; W. C. Allard, 123d New-York; Frank Fass, 12th New-York; John C. Claus, 43d New-York; Smith Austin, 32d New-York. Among the deaths from troops of other States are: Peter Manning, 49th Pennsylvania; Edwin Long, 111th Pennsylvania; A. Hughes, 23d New-Jersey; C. P. Maxwell, 1st Maine Artillery; C. Boury, 17th Maine; A. Bowley, ——, Vermont; S. D. Thurston, 11th New-Hampshire; E. Entriken, 134th Pennsylvania; Jacob Lindsey, 15th Connecticut; W. H. Black, wagon-master Quartermaster's Department; W. Elliott, cook, do., W. Richardson, driver, do.; Daniel P. Tuttle, 27th New-Jersey; Joe Evans, 49th Pennsylvania; J. M. Corcoran, 10th New-Hampshire; Jos. Keenan, "Scott's 900;" F. J. Halbert, 20th Michigan; T. G. Renyon, 7th Rhode Island; Lieut. Joseph Cook, 19th Indiana; Emerson Mayo, 11th Vermont; D. Boyer, 19th U. S. Infantry; P. Colby, 11th New-Hampshire; Oliver Jackson, nurse; W. M. Wright, rebel, 10th Georgia; A. B. Magee, 1st Pennsylvania Rifles. These, together with the names previously reported, make a total of 230 deaths in the hospitals of the city during the month of February.

DISPATCHES TO THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, March 5.

AFFAIRS IN SPAIN.

A telegram received here from BARONAS YOUNG, says a meeting was held in the Tabernacle to petition the President to remove Gov. HARDING and Judges WARD and BLAKE, and appoint good men in their places. He adds: "The majority of the Federal officers and other gentlemen are acting honorably." From this, it appears that Chief Justice KERRY, Secretary of State FULLER, and Superintendent of Indian Affairs DOAY are included in the compliment. Gen-great has Slaughtered failed to propose by legislation any measure for quieting the disaffection in that Territory, leaving that duty to the Executive Department.

CHARGES AGAINST COMMISSIONER HOLLOWAY.

The printed report of the Select Committee on the charges preferred against the Commissioner of the Patent Office, HOLLOWAY, will be accompanied by a defective and explanatory statement from that gentleman.

NO SIDE ARMS.

The Provost-Marshal has issued an order forbidding enlisted men of the army from wearing side arms of any kind within the limits of Washington, excepting when their duties require them. The reason given for this is—to secure the public peace, and preserve the property of the Government from loss through the negligence or viciousness of careless and unprincipled soldiers.

DOCUMENTS ON THE REBELLION.

Mr. FRANK MOORE has been authorized to prepare for the library of Congress a collection of documents on the rebellion from its commencement.

OUR WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENCE.

THE LAST DAY OF CONGRESS—THE CROWDS AT THE CAPITOL—SCENES AND INCIDENTS—THE NEW SENATE, ETC.

WASHINGTON, Friday Evening, March 4, 1863.

From an early hour this morning there was a steady stream of people toward the Capitol to witness the closing ceremonies of Congress. Citizen and soldier, lady and lord, chambermaid and child, representatives of every rank and profession, comprised the multitude which wended its way up the spacious walks, and through the labyrinthian halls to observe the dissolving views of the august bodies. The reporters' inclosure in the House was filled with members of the Press, and every available spot in the galleries was occupied. Though employed until a late hour this morning, nearly every member was present at the hour of reassembling—10 o'clock. Numerous bills yet remained undisposed of, which the Republican members were desirous of passing.

The Democratic members, however, evinced a disposition to stave them off, and by 10 o'clock were vigorously plying all the arts known to filibustering; motions to adjourn, calls for the yeas and nays, &c., &c., followed one another in quick succession. Everyone looked anxiously at the clock as the minute-hand slowly but surely, moved round the dial. The moment for adjourning was drawing near. The Democracy were carrying their point. This and that measure must come to grief. By 11¾ all the confusion prevailed which accompanies the closing hour of a district school, when the boys, locking up their desks, packing books and cudding their "traps," prepare to take their departure. Ten minutes later, however, all became hushed and silent as Speaker GROW arose to deliver his farewell address, which was read deliberately and in a quiet tone. Every ear was bent forward to catch the words of the departing officer. It was a scene which, though often repeated, is nevertheless worthy of being transferred to canvas.

At 12:05 the body was declared adjourned sine die, and the Thirty-seventh Congress passed into history. The closing exercises of the Senate was not less interesting. The galleries were crowded with spectators who witnessed them with deepest interest. Immediately after the adjournment the Executive session was convened for the purpose of swearing in the new members, which was done after the usual manner, the oath being administered to each one separately. The Executive session terminated at 12:20 o'clock, when the doors leading to the Chamber were thrown open, and friends of the Senators and spectators admitted.

Upon no previous Congress have such responsible duties devolved as upon the one just closed. Coming into power when the revolution burst forth upon the country, it has had to do with a class of legislation hardly known in the Halls of Congress for fifty years, and which will give it as prominent a place in history as that occupied by the rebellion itself. The destinies of the country never before have been intrusted to its hands. To crush treason and save the Republic, has been its mission. May its efforts not have been in vain. The following are the new members who are to occupy seats in the next Senate: Lemuel J. Bowden, Virginia; Charles R. Buckalew, John Conness, California; Thomas A. Hendricks, Indiana; Reverdy Johnson, Maryland; Edwin D. Morgan; Alexander Ramsey, Minnesota; William Sprague, Rhode Island; W. Wright, New-Jersey. Successors to Senators Henderson of Missouri, and Johnson of Tennessee, have not yet been chosen. Without speaking of the changes in the House, it is very necessary to mention that this honorable body will not be further disgraced by the presence of VALLANDIGHAM.

J.

EXTRA SESSION OF THE SENATE.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, March 5.

The main points of business transacted by the Senate, to-day, were the administration of the oath to Mr. THOMAS A. HAWKINS, of Indiana, and Mr. WILLIAM SPRAGUE, of Rhode Island, who took their seats for the first time.

The President pro tem., by resolution of Mr. ARNOLD, was authorized to appoint the Standing Committees.

The Executive session was confined to the passage of a resolution, to return all the nominations of military officers, &c., which expired with the late Senate, to the President of the United States.

It was not until after adjournment that the President's private Secretary reached the Capitol with several Executive communications.

Amusements.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—Mr. MARETZEK'S season will commence to-night, the opera being "Il Trovatore." It is rather a prodigal work to open with, inasmuch as it introduces nearly all the new artists of the company, and in that respect violates a rule of the musical HOYLE, which says that trump cards should be played separately. The cast is certainly one of the best we have ever had in this City, and from its absolute freshness must interest even those who are weary of the work itself. It may be added too that for the first time the whole of the opera will be played, without cuts and without interpolations.

The habitués of the Academy of Music will be astonished to find that they are only partially acquainted with their most favorite works, former managers having trimmed the musical winds to suit their limited operatic sails. Mr. MARETZEK intends to give all the operas of his repertoire entire—having a sufficient company for that purpose, and feeling, like a musician, that integrity in the music is not a superfluous quality in management. The orchestra and chorus are on a much larger scale than what we have been accustomed to since Mr. MARETZEK's absence in Mexico and Havana. Indeed, there is every reason to believe that, with the baton, Mr. MARETZEK will resume that splendid series of entertainments which was interrupted by the intrigues of humbugs and the paltry efforts of economical speculators. The future of opera, as a creditable art institution, depends on the success of the venture. It is impossible to find an impresario who possesses more talent, or who can claim (sadly, we fear,) greater experience. With a company composed of artists who have passed successfully the ordeal of a Havanese audience, and a prima donna of world-wide renown, it will be useless to hope—in these times of general theatrical success—of more favoring circumstances for a liberal and thorough experiment. To-night, at all events, it is certain there will be one of the most brilliant audiences ever assembled in the Academy of Music.

WINTER GARDEN.—Miss MARY PROVOST will take her first benefit in New-York—her native city—to-night, when SHERIDAN KNOWLES' famous play of "Love," altered by the author expressly for this lady, will be played.

NIBLO'S GARDEN.—Miss RUSHING will take her first benefit at this establishment to-night, appearing in her charming character of Satanella, in the play of that name.

WALLACK'S THEATRE.—Mr. GILBERT, a most reliable, painstaking and admirable artist, will have his first benefit at this house to-night, when the comedy of the "Busy Body" will be revived, with a splendid cast.

FROM THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC.

ORDERS ISSUED BY GEN. HOOKER

Important Regulations for the Promotion of Discipline.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, Thursday, March 5.

General Orders No. 19 contains the following:

Citizens non-resident will not be allowed to remain within the lines or camps of this army without a permit from the Provost-Marshal General. Commanding officers will cause all such persons within their commands to be brought before the Provost-Marshal General, for his decision and action.

The inspection reports of the following regiments and batteries give evidence of the necessity of strong exertions on the part of every officer and member to bring them up to the proper state of discipline and efficiency.

No further leaves of absence will be granted to these commands, and all officers absent therefrom must be recalled and the leaves revoked.

The following are the names of the regiments, batteries, &c.:

The Twelfth, Twenty-first, Twenty-third, Twentieth, Thirty-fourth, Thirty-fifth, Forty-second, Fifty-ninth, Sixtieth, Seventy-eighth, Eighty-eighth, One Hundred and Fourth, One Hundred and Fifth, One Hundred and Seventh and One Hundred and Forty-fifth New-York Regiments.

The Twenty-ninth, Sixty-eighth, Sixty-ninth, One Hundred and Twenty-fourth, One Hundred and Twenty-fifth, One Hundred and Thirty-second, One Hundred and Thirty-sixth and One Hundred and Fifty-fifth Pennsylvania, the Twenty-seventh Indiana and Thirty-second Massachusetts Volunteers.

Batteries B, First New-York, Pettit's; Tenth New-York, Bruen's; Eleventh New-York, Fuchsanner's; Battery C, First New-York, Barnes'; Battery D, First Maryland, Snow's; Battery A, First New-Jersey, Hexamer's; Battery C, First Pennsylvania, McCarthy's; Battery D, First Pennsylvania, Hoel's; Twelfth Ohio, Johnson's; Third Pennsylvania, Hampton's; Battery C, First New-York Battalion, Langner's.

The following regiments and batteries, appearing from the inspection reports to have earned high commendation from inspecting officers, it is left to the discretion of the corps commanders, having regard to the efficiency of their commands, to increase the leaves of absence and furloughs to these commands for the fifteen days following the receipt of this order to three, instead of two, enlisted men for every hundred present for duty, and three officers, instead of two, as provided in General Orders No. 3.

Regiments.—First, Second and Twentieth Massachusetts; Tenth and Nineteenth Maine; Fifth and Tenth New-York; Fifth New-Jersey; One Hundred and Eleventh Pennsylvania; Third Wisconsin and First Minnesota Volunteers.

Batteries—Fifth Maine, Leppin's; A, First Rhode Island, Arnold's; B, First Rhode Island, Hazard's; K, Fourth United States, Seeley's; D, First New-York, Osborne's; E, First Rhode Island, Randolph's; Fifth United States, Smith's; C, First Massachusetts, Martin's; A, First Massachusetts, McCartney's; Third New-York, Haven's; Second New-York, Blume's; E, First United States, Graham's; Fifth New-York, Taft's; B, First Connecticut, Brooker's.

The commandant of the cavalry corps will discontinue the leaves and furloughs authorized under General Orders No. 3, to regiments of his command neglectful in discipline, efficiency, care of arms, equipments, animals, &c. It is expected that all commanding officers of corps and divisions will disapprove and refuse all leaves and furloughs to regiments and batteries which are similarly situated. All officers and enlisted men absent beyond the period of their leave or furlough must be tried by Court-martial.

All sutlers will confine their traffic to the regiment to which they are appointed and belong. The goods and property of those found violating this order will be confiscated upon proof thereof. Sutlers who use the names or orders of officers to procure transportation, or purchase and sell contraband articles, will be subjected to the same penalties.

FROM THE STATE CAPITAL.

Consideration of the Annual Appropriation Bill in the Assembly—The Charges Against Speaker Callicot—Extension of the Chenango Canal, &c.

From Our Own Correspondent.

ALBANY, Thursday, March 5, 1863.

The consideration of the annual Appropriation bill, reported by Mr. DREW from the Committee of Ways and Means, engrossed the entire time of the House to-day. Nothing so clearly shows the great and varied interests of the State as the items of this bill. They embrace almost every subject imaginable, relate to every section and every class of people, and, considering the tendency to encroach on the Treasury, they require the closest scrutiny.

The item of $40,000 for salt superintendence and inspection brought out a disposition to abolish inspection altogether as wholly useless; and while the item was retained, it was with the understanding that a bill should be introduced abolishing the office of Inspector, and otherwise reduce its expenses.

The item of $4,500 to the New-York Pilot Commissioners was successfully attacked by Mr. DEAN, who moved to strike out even to the last copper. He denounced the Board of Commissioners of Pilots as unnecessary and expensive, and contended that so far from being entitled to anything, the law under which the salary or appropriation is asked was repealed in 1859, by a section in the Supply Bill of that year. The item was stricken out, with the understanding that, should it be made to appear that the item was a just one, it would be put into the Supply bill.

The charges made by Mr. T. C. FIELDS against Speaker CALLICOT, which are the special order for to-morrow at noon, will probably give rise to a contest on the appointment of the Committee to which to refer them. Mr. VAN BUREN's resolutions name a Committee of which Mr. DEAN, virtually Mr. CALLICOT's accuser, is the Chairman. It is the commonest principle of common law, that the accused shall have an impartial trial, and the right to object to notoriously prejudiced jurymen. Of this the friends of Mr. CALLICOT will avail themselves, with a view of securing perfect justice to the accused. They will, therefore, offer to substitute other names for those proposed by Mr. VAN BUREN, with the sole view of obtaining an impartial investigation and report.

I do not believe that all of those who opposed Mr. CALLICOT's election will oppose this proposition, and I confidently expect that the action of the House will be in harmony with this suggestion.

In the Senate, the bill to extend the Chenango Canal, was passed in Committee of the Whole without amendment.

BELLEVUE HOSPITAL MEDICAL COLLEGE.

Annual Commencement at Irving Hall—The Graduates—Addresses by Simeon Draper, The Most Rev. Archbishop Hughes and Others.

The second Annual Commencement of Bellevue Hospital Medical College took place last evening at Irving Hall, in the presence of one of the most brilliant audiences ever assembled within the walls of that famous and favorite edifice. The platform was occupied by Messrs. DRAPER, NORMOYLE, GRINNELL and BELL, Commissioners of Charities and Correction; Rev. Archbishop HUGHES and other distinguished members of the Trustees; Dr. ISAAC E. TAYLOR and the members of the Faculty—all of whom took their seats over half an hour after the time appointed for commencing the exercises.

Rev. Dr. BLACK commenced the proceedings by reading an appropriate prayer; after which Dr. TAYLOR administered the Hippocratic oath to the following graduating class, upon whom was conferred the degree of Doctor of Medicine:

GRADUATES.

Samuel Ackerson, New-York; Orlando W. Armstrong, New-York; James W. Collins, New-Jersey; Wm. Curry, New-Brunswick; Livingston Dexter, New-York; Charles W. Days, New-York; Elijah D. Everhart, M. D., Wisconsin; Wm. M. L. Fink, New-York; Philip Fox, Wisconsin; Edmund Goldmann, Louisiana; Rodney Griffin, New-York; Frank B. Hamilton, Jr., New-York; S. D. Humphrey, New-York; Geo. M. Irish, New-York; Francis Jones, Jr., New-York; Alexander E. Jenner, Ohio; Jacob W. Lockwood, New-York; Charles F. Loring, Maine; Alexander D. McGilvary, Nova Scotia; John D. Menzies, M. D., Wisconsin; Theodore F. Morris, New-Jersey; Lewis G. Morris, Nova Scotia; Rudolph Park, Pennsylvania; Thomas J. O'Halloran, Maryland; Henry E. Paine, Rhode Island; Washington T. Pope, New-York; Charles H. Pope, New-York; George H. Percival, New-York; Richard S. Potts, Kentucky; Gustave H. Pritz, New-York; George W. Prentiss, Canada; Henry Rockwell, Connecticut; David L. Rogers, Canada; Henry H. Sahin, A. M., Massachusetts; Moses Shepherd, Nova Scotia; Cooldge Stone, Massachusetts; George L. Taylor, New-Brunswick; J. Farmer Field, Illinois; James M. Waddle, M. D., Arkansas; Peter H. Weist, Pennsylvania; Albert S. Wentworth, Massachusetts; Alexander W. Wheeler, Ohio.

Prof. FRANK H. HAMMOND delivered the address to the graduates—replete with the most valuable advice—not the least important of which was the recommendation to get married early, following the example of their elder sister. He hoped that when called upon to serve their country either as physicians or soldiers they would not flinch. The address was enriched by an interesting résumé of the duties of army surgeons, and of the achievements of the medical men of our regular and volunteer armies, in which the speaker had much experience during the present war.

Hon. SIMEON DRAPER, President of the Board of Trustees, and of the Commissioners of Charities and Correction, on behalf of those organizations, addressed the audience and the graduating class, congratulating all connected with the college in its eminent success. He paid a compliment to the class for its attention to the duties of the college, and most cordially thanked the young men on behalf of the guardians of the institutions, of the inmates, and of the people at large. His brief and neat address was received with much favor.

T. L. O'CALLAGAN, of Kentucky, delivered the Valedictory Address on behalf of the graduating class. His production was marked with peculiar energy and force, and in no small degree by literary excellence. In defence of his profession from the popular allegation that "doctors disagree, and that the science of Medicine is incongruous," he quoted the dissentions among lawyers, judges, politicians, rulers and theologians, saying that physicians could claim no more infallibility than either of the classes named. He paid a glowing tribute of admiration to the science of Medicine, and his reminiscences of college scenes, his acknowledgment to the Faculty and his picture of the hopes and duties of the future, was peculiarly felicitous.

The Most Rev. Archbishop HUGHES then delivered a well-conceived address, filled with grateful praise of the science and practice of medicine, interesting reminiscences of the cholera season in Philadelphia in 1832, and the noble part then performed by the physicians of that city. He acknowledged his personal indebtedness to the profession for recent services, and paid a deserved tribute of praise to the Institution.

After an address by JAMES W. GERARD, Esq., the meeting closed with the benediction, followed by the National airs by DODWORTH's band, which had during the evening periodically discoursed operatic and other selections, to the great delight of all present.

Premium on Gold.—The Subscriber, who cannot change his prices with the fluctuations of gold without incurring enormous expense in advertising the changes, is compelled to sell his Pens at old prices. Thinking his customers entitled to the benefit of the premium on gold, rather than the Wall-street detectors of the best currency this country ever had, he now offers to all remitting the amount of their orders in gold, the full premium in this City on the day when received. In this way he hopes to do the country and his customers some good without injuring himself, for the Mentor Pen cannot be made without gold. When Paper Money is sent United States is preferred over any other. A. MORTON,

The angel came at evening hour,
And twined their garlands fair,
And plucked the loveliest in the bower,
And left them weeping there.

For when the morning dimly shone,
All dark with mist and gloom,
Their sweet forget-me-not had gone
To fields of deathless bloom.

The relatives and friends are invited to attend the funeral, at No. 319 Orchard-st., Brooklyn, on Friday, March 6, at 2½ o'clock, without further notice.

HOSTETTER'S CELEBRATED STOMACH BITTERS.

A PURE AND POWERFUL TONIC, CORRECTIVE AND ALTERATIVE OF WONDERFUL EFFICACY IN DISEASE OF THE STOMACH, LIVER AND BOWELS.

PROTECTIVE PROPERTIES.

PREVENTS FEVER AND AGUE AND BILIOUS REMITTENT FEVERS; FORTIFIES THE SYSTEM AGAINST MIASMA AND THE EVIL EFFECTS OF UNWHOLESOME WATER; INVIGORATES THE ORGANS OF DIGESTION AND THE BOWELS;

STRENGTHENS THE NERVES, AND TENDS TO PROLONG LIFE.

REMEDIAL PROPERTIES.

CURES DYSPEPSIA, LIVER COMPLAINT, DEBILITY AND NERVOUS HEADACHE; GENERAL DEBILITY, NERVOUSNESS, DEPRESSION OF SPIRITS, CONSTIPATION, COLIC, INTERMITTENT FEVERS, SEA-SICKNESS, CRAMPS AND SPASMS, AND ALL COMPLAINTS OF EITHER SEX, ARISING FROM BODILY WEAKNESS, WHETHER INHERENT IN THE SYSTEM OR PRODUCED BY SPECIAL CAUSES.

Nothing that is not wholesome, genial, and restorative in its nature enters into the composition of HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. This popular preparation contains no mineral of any kind; no deadly botanical element; no fiery excitant; but is a combination of the extracts of rare balsamic herbs and plants with the purest and mildest of all diffusive stimulants.

It is well to be forearmed against disease, and, so far as the human system can be protected by human means against maladies engendered by an unwholesome atmosphere, impure water, and other external causes, HOSTETTER'S BITTERS may be relied on as a safeguard.

In districts infested with Fever and Ague, it has been found infallible as a preventive and trustworthy as a remedy. Thousands who resort to it under apprehension of an attack, escape the scourge; and thousands who neglect to avail themselves of its protective qualities in advance, are cured by a very brief course of this mild curative medicine. Fever and Ague patients, after being plied with quinine for months in vain, until fairly saturated with that dangerous alkaloid, are not unfrequently restored to health within a few days by the use of HOSTETTER'S BITTERS.

The weak stomach is rapidly invigorated and the appetite restored by this agreeable Tonic, and hence it works wonders in cases of Dyspepsia and in late confirmed forms of Indigestion. Acting as a gentle and painless aperient, as well as upon the liver, it also invariably relieves the Constipation superinduced by irregular action of the digestive and secretive organs.

Persons of feeble habit, liable to Nervous Attacks, Lowness of Spirits and Fits of Languor, find prompt and permanent relief from the Bitters. The testimony on this point is most conclusive, and from both sexes.

The agony of Bilious Colic is immediately assuaged by a single dose of the stimulant, and by occasionally resorting to it, the return of the complaint may be prevented.

For Sea Sickness it is a positive specific—either removing the contents of the stomach, and with them the terrible nausea, or relaxing the internal irritation by which the disposition to vomit is caused.

As a General Tonic, HOSTETTER'S BITTERS produce effects which must be experienced or witnessed before they can be fully appreciated. In cases of Constitutional Weakness, Premature Decay, and Debility and Decrepitude arising from Old Age, it exercises the electric influence. In the convalescent stages of all diseases, it operates as a delightful invigorant. When the powers of nature are relaxed, it operates to reinforce and redouble life.

Last, but not least, it is the Only Safe Stimulant, being manufactured from sound and innocuous materials, and entirely free from the acrid elements present more or less in all the ordinary tonics and stomachics of the day.

The fact is well known to physicians that the basis of all the medicinal stimulants of the pharmacopœia is fiery and unpurified alcohol, an article which no medication can deprive of its pernicious properties. The liquors of commerce are still worse. They are all adulterated. Hence the Family, while universally admitting the necessity for diffusive tonics, hesitate to employ those in common use lest the remedy should prove deadlier than the disease. During the last twenty years, the quality of these articles has been continually deteriorating, and it is notorious that the fluids which bear the names of the various spirituous liquors, are flavored and fired up with corrosive drugs, to a degree which renders them dangerous to the healthy and murderous to the sick. Under these circumstances, medical men are glad to avail themselves of a preparation absolutely free from those objections, and combining the three invaluable properties of a stimulant, a corrective, and a gentle laxative. HOSTETTER'S BITTERS are therefore held in high estimation by our most eminent practitioners, and bid fair to supersede all other invigorants, both in public hospitals and in private practice. No family medicine has been so universally, and, it may be truly added, deservedly popular with the intelligent portion of the community, as HOSTETTER'S BITTERS.

Prepared by HOSTETTER & SMITH, Pittsburgh, Penn., U.S., and sold by all Druggists and Family Grocers everywhere. Depot, No. 60 Broadway.

This story is one of those fortunate creations, which even genius cannot always achieve. The heroine (NORA) is a poor girl, richly endowed with beauty and talent, who falls in love with a rich young man—her intellect—who is worthy of her, but who, unfortunately, has a haughty, purse-proud mother and sisters, who despise "common people," and would prefer an alliance with gilded vice to one with honest poverty. Hence come complications, sorrows, sufferings, and an exhibition of heroism and nobleness on the part of NORA, such as alternately make the pulse of the reader tingle with indignation, and his heart throb with sympathy and admiration.

FARMS.

A PROMISING INVESTMENT.

FOR SALE, ON ACCOMODATING TERMS.

A farm of 100 acres, with a good brick house and appendages—one and a half hour from Chambers-street depot, and within ten minutes of depot at Peekskill.

It is situated on beautiful rising ground, with many natural beauties, and well watered, and a copious and swift stream through the land.

It can be easily divided into several building sites, from every one of which a fine view of the North River and surrounding country can be had—the United States Topographical Engineers' Station on Dunderberg Mountain, three miles round, being near the rear of the premises. Every train of the Hudson River Railroad stops at Peekskill.

The property can be obtained on advantageous terms, considering that the environs of Peekskill notwithstanding the great general advance, have not felt, to the same extent as the region below, the effects of the speculation and consequent rise in prices.

Apply to G. BERLE, No. 20 Water-st., New-York.

Also for sale, 16 acres land at Bay Ridge.

FOR SALE.—TWO SUPERIOR FARMS, OF 75 acres each, one mile from depot at Plainfield, N. ## Important Circular of the Mexican Government.

Official Exposition of the Sentiments and Purposes of the Mexican Nation.

DEPARTMENT OF INTERIOR AND FOREIGN AFFAIRS, MEXICO, Aug. 19, 1862.

(CIRCULAR.)

CITIZEN GOVERNOR: The return of the citizen H. Lerdo to the Ministry of Finances, and that of the undersigned to the Ministry of Interior and Foreign Affairs, have put an end to the Ministerial crisis, and the affairs of the State will henceforth be governed by the number of Ministers required by our laws.

The Mexican people, forgetting their disasters and their civil wars, in order to march against their unjust invaders, are at present more than ever entitled, in these perilous days, to a complete knowledge of the principles, the intentions and the conduct of the men who administer their affairs. It is much to be feared that the absence of the Government, in the midst of the gravest difficulties, evidently the most delicate of any situation that our country's history has heretofore presented; it is to be feared, I repeat, that that silence, above all after the modification of its members which it has just undergone, might be interpreted in a sinister manner, not only by the ill-disposed, but by true patriots, impatient and bewildered. In consequence, the confidence of the nation in the loyalty of the Executive power would perhaps vanish—a fatal result, the gravest of evils, and which would only serve to fill with satisfaction the heart of the ambitious despot who has visited us with the scourge of war, and those of the traitors who second his pernicious designs.

In fact, the Ministers aspire too much and too justly, to acquire the esteem and the consideration of their fellow citizens, to allow them to entertain the idea of concealing from them their intentions or their acts; so much the more, as this want of frankness would tend to the triumph of a calumny upon truth. Therefore, the citizen President of the Republic has desired that, while announcing to you that the two Departments of the State have been filled, I should also make known to you the political programme that he has approved, and which the Ministers intend to follow and to develop as long as they are supported by the opinion of the country and the President's confidence.

The Government will fulfil the object of its institution, and do justice to the principal desire of the nation, by displaying the greatest activity and the greatest energy in order to repulse the foreign invader who has dared to desecrate the country's soil in contempt of the faith of treaties and of the independence of nations, the base of all public rights.

The Congress of the Union thought it necessary to accord to the Executive all the means necessary to bring to a successful termination this eminently national enterprise.

The attitude, full of vigor, which the Government has taken, in virtue of this concession, might, perhaps, excite the choler of our foreign and domestic foes—but it should not excite the alarm of those who sincerely love liberal institutions, and who well know that a transitory dictatorship, established to save the country from perils as serious as those which now menace our autonomy and our liberties, is not only for us a constitutional means, but also that this means has been employed by ancient and modern Republics, by those even who are the most thoroughly imbued with the spirit of Democracy.

WASHINGTON himself requested, in a moment of crisis, that the laws might sleep. Besides, it is not really logical to confound a dictatorship which serves to loyally defend a people's interests, with that which oppresses and complicates its miseries; thus confuse the beneficent dictatorship of Gen. GUERRERO with that of SANTA ANNA, so fatal to the Republic, and which brought upon it so many misfortunes and so much ignominy.

In the present state of things the additional power confided to the Administration is, for the Republic itself, a great but indispensable [illegible]. I said a cruel necessity for the Government, because it must [illegible] of the nation [illegible] of the popular institutions, so precious to the Republic, not only on account of their merit, but also on account of the great sacrifices they have cost us, and which we have to be interrupted. But the interruption of that working is another sacrifice to preserve those institutions from a ruin, without this dictatorship, which the Prince who now aims to impose a yoke upon us, seeks to bring about.

The day on which the Government can announce to Congress and to the whole nation that the common peril has ceased to exist, will be the happiest of the Administration. But until then the abdication of this power would not be patriotic. The nation which created it, and which maintains it by its powerful support, cannot be interested in its destruction; but it has a right to require of its servants, whom it has honored with a confidence, which could not be more unlimited or more holy in its object, that they should work unceasingly to accumulate efficacious means to avert the perils with which injustice menaces us.

The nation desires that, in everything appertaining to its liberties and its resources, the power accorded to the Government should be exercised upon that which is necessary; but only upon that which is necessary to save its independence, Constitution and territory. In a word, the nation wishes the war to be made with vigor, and that the means that have been conceded for that purpose should lead to the least possible sacrifice either political or material.

It is thus that the Government comprehends the tendencies of public opinion, and it will therein do it justice. If it should cease to act, through carelessness or from fear; if it should for a single instant succumb to the suggestions of ambition, which would be an inexcusable faithlessness; if it should complaisantly flatter itself with wicked aspirations; if it should allow itself to be influenced by the absurd mania of innovation through caprice, or to parade its discretionary power; if it should maintain, for another single day, this power after the country shall have ceased to have causes of fear from its enemies, the Government would undoubtedly merit the withdrawal of the confidence of the Republic. But when all the Ministers believe that they have worthily prepared themselves to serve their country, decided as they are to make a sacrifice of their reputation and of their life, as it is the duty of every good Mexican, they may, with assurance, declare that in the management of public affairs, they can never be reproached with having failed in energy, zeal or patriotism; hence they believe that they have a right to ask the Mexican people not to view with suspicion the transient existence of a power that the National Congress has only made great that it might be equal to the circumstances of our situation.

But although the reproach of cowardice or of depravity, may not be addressed to the Ministry, it may nevertheless commit faults; it will endeavor, however, not to do so, and for that it will be guided by the excellent judgment of the people; it will follow their inspirations so much the more willingly, as a grave fault on the part of the Administration would be deplorable, even for the Administration. Not that the fault might cause it to fall, but because it would exercise a disastrous, perhaps irreparable influence upon the future fate of the nation.

That being granted, if the Republic continues by its powerful cooperation to remodel government action, the defence that we will make will be such that it will give us a glorious place beside the great deeds of our fathers, and we will avoid losing in a moment on account of our misery and cowardice the independence and the liberty that we inherit from them, and which they conquered by such a long and heroic perseverance, which would be, beyond all measure, unworthy of and fatal to Mexico.

The Government is therefore very far from having the loss of preparing its cause from that of its people, or of proceeding, even at only for an instant, without the support of the national opinion. Our own history furnishes us with numerous and great lessons upon the influence that unanimous exertions exercise upon the fate of our arms. During the unfortunate Texan campaign our democracy was vituperated and humiliated, while those who formed what is styled the elevated classes of society, satisfied at their ease, their pride and all their passions, while contemning our institutions. At the head of this immense disorder was placed that fatal man, as ambitious as he was incapable. In 1846 we had yet but the name of a Confederation, and the Republic, weakened by the terrible inheritance of unitary regimen, found itself very ill-disposed for the purpose of repelling the invasion. To crown all evils, this same chief, so fatal to us, was precisely the one charged with the organization of our army, already corrupted, and it was impossible, for the brave men who fought in its ranks, to arrest the progress of the evil and to vanquish it.

From thence resulted our reverses at home and our discredit abroad. The recollection of those fatal wars enormously injured our international relations. But those periods of sadness and of mourning present a singular contrast to that of 1829, and especially to that of 1862. Do those privileged classes, haughty and powerful, still exist? Are the people still in abjection? Who will henceforth have the vain ambition to tyrannize over them? What army have we seen, thus far, more injured to war than our army of the East? What officers more experienced than those of our army? What General more republican than he who commands it? What is there in common between our days of mourning and the brilliant one of the 5th of May? There is certainly nothing in common between our present situation and that which gave birth to the centralization, if it is so, perhaps, the dictatorship; but the present dictator, like the one of 1829, knows that he has only been invested with this power by the people and for the people with whom he frankly allies himself, and who has many times tested him their much enthusiastic assistance.

The Government will employ for the defence, as just as the Republic, all the means that international laws and the practice of nations recognize as legitimate between belligerents. In consequence, every effort, every sacrifice that the love of country and the dignity of a free people can suggest will be made to repulse our enemies. The cause is great; in consequence our aim should be equally great in order to conquer it. Never, however, will we make use of force, unless in extraordinary majority; never will we follow the example of those who used their legions in Mexico to restore the worst-out principle of intervention in the Government of foreign nations; finally, we will never employ the falsehood which our enemies have not blushed to make use of, stipulating and breaking, by turns, solemn treaties, with the object of gaining by these means advantages that otherwise they could not have obtained.

The Government will put everything in operation to hasten the conclusion of treaties of alliance with the nations whom Mexico most regards as sisters, as whose inhabitants have demonstrated, in a thousand ways, their lively sympathies for the triumph of our cause. It will strive, also, to bring about a good understanding between those nations, in order to finally realize the grand idea of an American Confederation, which would augment the force and the respectability of each one of the Republics established upon this beautiful continent, and which would put a check to the chaos desires which might be entertained of subjugating it,—desires which have been frequently viewed with a much too favorable eye by some of the Governments of the old world. For it, as the bond and the base of that alliance could be established the creation of an international assembly, in the midst of which would be discussed and settled differences which might arise between the contracting parties, those Republics might glorify themselves with possessing an institution which would commence and greatly advance the confraternity of nations, founded upon the immovable basis of justice, established by treaties, and, in consequence, the barbarous law of ely it war would be abolished. This would be a novelty not less extraordinary than the creation and the authority of the tribunals which were established to render justice, and which put an end to the duels and private wars during the dark period called the middle age. The authority of the American Congress would be far preferable to the practice of arbitrations, difficult at times, and most frequently without guarantees, and, until now, so sterile that, notwithstanding their recommendation by the last Congress of Paris, Portugal was refused, a short time after the publication of that declaration, this pacific means of regulating a difference with the French Government, because NAPOLEON III. had her notified that France recognized the judge of her honor than herself. Singular honor, truly, and which now exacts our ruin as a satisfaction of the outrage that we have inflicted upon him in defending our independence on the plains of Puebla.

Never will the present Government fail to religiously fulfil the conventions of the treaties which regulate our relations with friendly Powers, and by every possible means will it endeavor that the stipulations favorable to the Republic shall be observed. It is well understood that our good will cannot extend itself to the stipulations concerning France, and which have now no longer force, in virtue of the state of war which exists between that Power and the Republic. As for the rest, inasmuch as we have never in the least aspired to employ in our relations with foreign Governments an ambitious or outrageous policy, since on the contrary we might reproach ourselves upon this point, a condescension which has encouraged pretensions each time more exaggerated; it remains understood that in affairs which have connection with international law, public or private, we must confine ourselves to an exact fulfilment of our duties, and to an invincible opposition to every unjust pretension contrary to the good of the country. The nation may have an entire assurance that, let come what will, with the question that the Republic at present so worthily supports, we will never make an unjust or dishonorable peace.

The maintenance and the payment of our troops, and the other cares of the national defence, require abundant resources, which the Government will obtain by all the means at its disposition, without, however, exhausting the resources of our riches. The Government is perfectly convinced that the nation will second these efforts with its support; because it feels most truly that it owes to itself the maintenance of an imposing attitude in order to obtain greater probabilities of successful resistance in the war, and at last to conclude a peace which could not be advantageous to it by acting otherwise.

Every liberty, every legitimate interest, will obtain from the Government the completest protection, which will only meet with such restraint as the war against the invader may demand. And again, with that sole restriction, the Government will act in such a manner that all the branches of the public administration shall follow their course, and, if it is possible, a progressive course.

The Government will use all its efforts, as heretofore, to assemble the General Congress, because now, more than ever, it would be proper that the first of our powers should not fail to present itself upon the political arena; its absence, in fact, might cause it to be understood that foreign invasion had already compassed to weaken our internal regimen. Besides, the Government ardently desires that its progress shall be subordinate to the just inspirations of the people's representatives, giving them an account of its acts, provoking the deliberations that the public good require, and meriting, in their enlightened and conscientious judgment, the confidence which it requires in order to respond to the noble aspirations of the country.

The declarations of the state of siege which have interrupted, in some of the States, the regular order, will now be revised in an eminently liberal spirit, they will not be maintained and henceforth those exceptional measures will only be taken in the isolated cases in which it would be impossible to avoid, by any other means, the perils that the presence or the approach of the invading forces and their allies, the traitors to the country, would cause—or to calm the violent discords of some State—or to vanquish the resistance of some Governor refusing to comply with the President's orders; for the latter will not consent to any usurpation of his constitutional power increased by the vote of Congress when by the national will and from the nature even of the peril that menaces us, the voice of him who represents the nation should be everywhere promptly obeyed. But the Government will take care to prevent the declaration of the state of siege giving rise to other extra legal powers than those rendered indispensable for the maintenance of peace, and in order that the respective populations may cooperate, like all the others, in the national defence. Finally, the measures which have just been taken concerning the state of siege of Tlaxcala are a sure guarantee of the system which the Administration proposes following in these affairs. Its respect for the States' franchises, for their political capacity, is as sincere as profound; for it knows that these different centres of action preserve throughout the Republic civil life and liberty, which it would be impossible to obtain otherwise upon so vast a territory as that of the Mexican Republic. But, nevertheless it cannot carry that respect to the point of compromising the existence and the honor of the country, and, consequently, the existence of that federative form itself; for that form would only serve to precipitate its ruin if it was not confined to its natural limits, that is to say, within the bounds fixed by the national pact which fortifies the Government's action. The sound judgment of the nation, the excellent spirit which animates it inspires the Government with the confidence that it will so but rarely necessary to have recourse to coercive measures; it is, on the other hand, assured that its appeal to the people will continue to produce the spontaneous cooperation of all Mexicans.

Everything useful—everything patriotic, the liberty of the Press, and the right of assembling will be amply favored in order that those powerful agents may contribute to the triumph of the national cause.

But enlightened and patriotic men will comprehend that, during such a war as this it is impossible to avoid efficaciously and promptly repressing every species of manifestation favorable to the enemy, and violent diatribes against the authorities emanating from the people.

For the rest, that patriotic, reasonable and moderate opposition—that opposition which enlightens without wounding or scandalizing, far from being persecuted, will excite the gratitude of the Government, whose whole satisfaction consists in doing well.

The situation imperiously exacts that no clemency should be used toward traitors. The Government will take proper measures, in order that that black and perfidious ingratitude on the part of those men who, after having struggled against the ly and reform, have turned against their country the arms that she had generously confided to them to sustain her independence, shall not be repeated in the future.

The bands of factious thieves, remains of the Reaction and allies of France, who have crowned all their crimes by the blackest of all misdeeds, will be pursued with the utmost rigor. The Government will arrange so as to seize upon all those cowardly incendiaries of machinations who conspire in the dark to devastate and dishonor their country, and will punish them severely. On the contrary, it will prove its special predilection for our glorious army of the East, and for the brave men who, marching in its footsteps, will testify their valor and give an example of all the eminently Republican virtues.

Reform will be maintained and developed in a Democratic direction and in the enlightened principle of the complete independence of religious matters from those of the State. The abuses which have arisen, will be corrected with a firm hand, and the influence of the preachers, to whatever belief they may belong, must restrict itself to the affairs of their ministry, without causing the least inconvenience to the public, and without in any wise obstructing the acts of civil life.

Such are the principal bases of the policy which the Government thinks necessary to follow in the difficult situation of the Republic.

The Government has perfect confidence that the Republic will save itself, because it sees every day what this magnanimous nation is capable of; because it is convinced that it will not allow itself to be deceived by the artful manœuvres of a Prince, who, even while offering his friendship to Mexico, wages upon her a war insidious in its object and infâm means; and who, even while protesting his respect for the nation's vote, menaces to destroy precisely the Government emanating from universal suffrage, as if that Government was not an image of the majesty of the Mexican people; or as if the power that it exercises by the free will of the country was only the price of perfidious and bloody deeds. He has only sent his legions to Mexico in order that the satisfaction arising from military glory may prevent great and sympathetic France from feeling the whole weight of a tyranny to which she has been unaccustomed. But NAPOLEON III. has not audacious enough to the grandeur and to the power of the Emperor, his uncle; and, if that extraordinary man succumbed, impelled by a universal hatred, it is an incontestable proof for us that the greatest genius cannot, or any length of time, trample with impunity upon a people's rights of justice and of liberty. The Emperor of the French has entered upon the path of intervention which was already so fatal to France, both when she committed the aggression, and when she was the victim of it.

We rely upon the sympathies and the sympathies of the great Liberal party, not only in America, where we have a community of interests with other nations, but also in France, with which we have nothing in common, if it is not a sentiment of justice. Among the French, themselves oppressed, all the men of honor, all the men distinguished by their knowledge, who have not allowed themselves to be gained by the corrupting influence of the Imperial Government, are for and with us. France's allies, even, abandoned her when they were able to comprehend the unjustifiable designs of a Prince who, from his insatiable thirst of dominion, from his utter contempt of plighted faith, by his system of political intervention, is, and should be, regarded by all as the enemy of human kind.

There is still another motive which should fortify the mind of the nation in this war, upon its part so just and so noble, and that is, the recollection of the prodigies performed by our fathers in the bloody struggle that they had to sustain against the Colonial Government. The Spanish forces were not found only in each or each places of the Territory; they were found everywhere and in everything—in the Administration, in the militia, in the family, in all the traditions, in all the ideas then reigning. And yet our fathers struggled against this Colossus with a thousand supports, dating back three centuries, until at last they succeeded in delivering their country, and thus converting to an immense glory their immense past shame and their immense misfortune. Thanks to the heroism and the admirable constancy of those eminent men, and thanks also to the numerous regiments of the people, who, at the end of a terrible revolution, extended its liberty and established reform, that nation is to-day stronger and more powerful than ever. It will know how to multiply its sacrifices, in order to preserve intact the inheritance of its ancestors. It will thereby merit the title of the "bulwark of the American-Latin race," and will become the admiration of the world, by continuing the magnificent traditions of Republics triumphing in their wars with the most powerful despots.

Be pleased, &c., &c.

Liberty and Reform.

Reply to Mr. Isherwood's Report on the Pensacola.

NEW-YORK, Tuesday, March 3, 1863.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Under date of Feb. 23, a statement from Washington is published in the papers in which the Secretary of the Navy is said to have transmitted to Congress a report of Mr. ISHERWOOD, in regard to the engines of the Pensacola, in which that eminent engineer is said to have made the following statement:

"Owing to numerous blunders the machinery was two years and nine months in preparation. Its cost was $326,400. She was with difficulty got to New-Orleans, and was there reported useless until her machinery was replaced."

This report is the dying revenge of the Ex-Engineer-in-Chief, for the exposure which Mr. DENNISON made to Congress and the country of his incompetency, and it is substantially as false as it is malicious.

The Pensacola's engines were made from drawings and a model, which never were checked, and so "blunders" were ever committed about her. Her engines were finished, and laid in the ship at Washington, many months before they were needed. Her boat we do not exactly know, but her engines have four cylinders, 36 inches by 5 feet. Whatever generally there are but two, and of course they cost twice as much as these; but, of the saving in coal resulting, the most is seen repairs, and a consequent profit results. It will always pay to increase engine space, as now in England they are doing, by using four and six cylinders instead of two, although the first expense is more.

As to her voyage to New-Orleans, she got there without difficulty; she broke nothing, and used whatever required. Her failure will depend, not upon the engines, but upon the way they were used. It is very easy to get them so that they would not go at all.

However honesty, not to say decency, would have required ISHERWOOD, if he found by his reports that the engines did not perform well, to send us a copy of those reports, and of the "cards" by which the engine makes its own infallible report of its defects, and their cause, and to ask us whether the machine was working as it was designed. Any merchant would have done so. But, instead of that, he sends such stuff as quoted above to Congress and the country, hoping in his own fall to pull down everything which promises any improvement, for the future, and never once lets us know of what he complains.

The fact is that the engines of the Pensacola are the best propeller engines in the world. If the Secretary of the Navy thinks they are not, he can easily sell them for merchant service; if he thinks it worth while rather to find out the facts, than to trust ISHERWOOD's report, and will carry out the original agreement on which they came hither, by giving us the control of them, we will show him, and the country, that they will do more work for the coal used than any propeller engines in existence, and that there is no ship of the navy which can go as fast as the Pensacola at sea. If, however, he is so much impressed by ISHERWOOD's boss, as to refuse to have the engines put in order, and fairly tried, (and we have no reason to suppose he is,) the engines will, of course, be a loss, but not through our fault.

Yours, truly, DICKERSON & SICKELS.

Gen. Barnard on the Rebellion.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

The inclosed letters may have interest enough to justify their publication. I know that even yet, to denounce Slavery—to speak of it as the root of the "causes of dissension" which have involved this nation in fearful civil war, and which must be, if not extirpated, pruned and fenced in, that it can extend no further—is to be, with many, an Abolitionist.

In this sense I am perfectly content to receive the appellation.

Three years ago Slavery was guarded by constitutional guarantees, and it had not yet committed the great crime. The case is now different; those constitutional guarantees have been spurned, and that Slavery may not only be secure where it is, but that it may have the liberty of indefinite expansion—that it may be the ruling principle of the Government, this nation and this Continent—rebellion has been instituted against a Government the most beneficent, the most guileless of oppression of any existing.

This nation will nullify itself—it will exhibit a judicial blindness unparalleled in the history of nations, if, after this experience it has had—this wound in its very vitals—it takes back the serpent uncoiled to its bosom.

There are so many whose opinions I respect, whose patriotism is unquestionable, who still hug the delusion of the practicability of a "Union as it was," with fresh guarantees for Slavery, that I feel as if it was incumbent upon every well-wisher of his country who feels as I do, that there is no real issue to this war but the subjugation of the "Slave Power," to speak out.

There can be no reunion with Slavery as it was; even though its extinction be not a sine qua non, it must be fettered and bound, and, as a political power forever annihilated. When this is felt to be, as it is, the condition of honorable national existence—of any peace which shall be a peace indeed, and not anarchy or chronic war—then we may expect that union of all parties, and that earnestness for the cause of truth and humanity, which, through God's blessing, shall enable us to trample under foot the real enemy to our peace. Then the proclamation, instead of being denounced as converting the war into one of abolition, will be recognized to be what it is, a just and proper military measure, and the one thing which is alone calculated to avert the hostility of Europe and to enchain to our cause, her force of opinion, the influence of its Governments.

The able work of Prof. CAIRNES (The Slave Power) is familiar to most of your readers. The lecture, of which he speaks, should be extensively distributed in this country. These works show, as our cause is seen from a high European stand-point, and we shall be blind, indeed, if, with such men as Prof. CAIRNES, STUART MILL, de GASPARIN, LABOULAYE, VICTOR HUGO, &c., to speak for us, we fail to see the rectitude of our own cause, and to distinguish its true points.

I am, very respectfully, your most obedient,

J. G. BARNARD, Brig.-Gen.

WASHINGTON, March 2, 1863.

PROF. CAIRNES TO GEN. BARNARD.

No. 74 LOWER MOUNT-ST., DUBLIN, Feb. 2, 1863.

MY DEAR SIR:—I have to return you my sincere thanks for your letter of the first of December, as well as for your handsome volume on the battle of Bull Run, which you have done me the favor to send me. The latter only reached me a few days ago, and I have just read it with much interest and satisfaction.

It gives me much gratification to find that my attempt to explain the significance of your great struggle has met the approval of those who, like yourself, have had so much better means of studying its causes than I have had; and I have to thank you very much for the pleasure you have given me by the expression of this approval.

You refer to the state of opinion in this country on American affairs. I am happy to tell you (what you will doubtless have learned from the papers) that, since the issue of the Emancipation Proclamation, a remarkable reaction has set in against the Southern tendencies which were long so prevalent. At a meeting held in Exeter Hall a few days since, one of the largest and most enthusiastic which has been held in England for years; the reception given to the President's name was as cordial as it could have been in an assembly room at Boston.

I am, dear sir, with much respect very truly yours,

J. E. CAIRNES.

I send you herewith a copy of a lecture, which I delivered here a short time since; you will see it has had a large circulation.
